Declares the New York Judge Is the Logical Candidate.

OLNEY IS STRONGER

So Is Gray, but Parker Has Support of Sage of Princeton.

HIS VIEWS ON A PLATFORM

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

Philadelphia, May 30.—Grover Cleveland is quoted as follows in the North American this morning by a correspondent who talked with him at Princeton:

"I have believed for some time, and I believe now, that Judge Alton B. Parker of New York will be the nominee of the national Democratic convention for the presidential office. This expression of my opinion is not new. In reiterating it at this time, when there seems to be a lull in the Parker movement, I do not mean to yield my original judgment, which was that either Mr. Olney or Judge Gray might have proved the strongest candidate for the Democracy to name for the contest with Mr. Roosevelt. Circumstances and the state of public sentiment was such, however, that months ago it became apparent that Judge Parker was the man upon whom the conservative element of the party could and should concentrate. Neither the circumstances nor the state of public sentiment has changed, and Judge Parker remains now, as he has been for some months, the logical candidate of his party."

Prefers Olney or Gray.

Mr. Cleveland's own preference among those discussed for the Democratic presidential nomination has long been either Richard Olney of Massachusetts or Judge Gray of Delaware. As an experienced and intelligent student of politics, intent, without the slightest approach to selfish ambition, upon seeing his party redeemed from the dangerous and disastrous control of the radicals, and being convinced that the Democracy's pursuit of false gods is at an end, he has settled upon Judge Parker of New York as the man best equipped to carry and protect the party banner.

But in his support of Judge Parker Mr. Cleveland desires not to interrupt the harmony of his relations with Olney and Gray, to either of whom all the sentiment resultant from intimate association and acquaintance inclines him. Hence his guarded utterances and the hesitancy he displays in consenting to formal interviews. It was only after making the unenviable nature of the position he occupies above entirely clear, insisting upon its full appreciation, that Mr. Cleveland consented to talk for publication. Pursuing the same line of thought he continued:

Wished to Check Hearst Movement.

"Some months ago conservative leaders of the Democracy began to experience alarm over the strength this Man Hearst was seemingly developing. I took no stock in the Hearst candidacy myself, but, realizing the necessity for checking a movement which might grow formidable, I occupied ground, in common with a number of others, and gave out a statement favoring Judge Parker for the nomination. I do not mean to intimate," continued Mr. Cleveland, "that my support of Judge Parker was given grudgingly," and lapsing again into coutiousness he explained:

"I named Judge Parker at that time because his candidacy had gained such a lead over that of any other man, whose nomination could be deemed acceptable to conservative Democrats, that he appeared to me as the most likely man about whom the element of the Democracy could concentrate, in its efforts to purge the party of that irrationalism with which it has been afflicted in the last two presidential campaigns. Quite naturally, because of my long association with them and my intimate knowledge of their abilities, I have thought, from the time the talk about the 1904 nominee began, that either Olney or Gray might be the most available choice for the party candidacy.

Aligned Himself For Parker.

"I pretend to no right in the direction of party affairs, however, not even to the right to advise the party upon men or measures, so when it appeared necessary to concentrate upon some available man, in order to stifle the Hearst movement, I gave up thought of either Olney or Gray being nominated and aligned myself with those who were urging Judge Parker's nomination.

"When I expressed the hope and belief that Parker might be nominated," continued Mr. Cleveland, speaking with great earnestness, and in a spirit of full conviction, "I knew him to be a first-class, honest, safe and manly man. He is very able, fit in every way to lead the new Democracy, and I still entertain the expectation that he will be the nominee of the St. Louis convention."

At this point Mr. Cleveland desired the interview to terminate and it was only by dint of much persuasion that he was induced to continue. In the evening, when the correspondent returned to the Cleveland mansion to submit to the former president for his approval the quoted portions of his interview, Mr. Cleveland read to him a poem by Sam Kiser of the Chicago Record-Herald, as expressive, in a degree, of his own ideas about the brevity with which a platform should be endowed. In the poem Kiser travesties the platform-making activities of both of the great political parties, telling of the things either will promise to do without sincerely intending performance, and aiming only to "humbug" the voters, and ending with the trenchant statement that if he were writing he would write, and then stop with these words: "We'll be honest; we'll be fair."

In reading the rhyme Mr. Cleveland's

FIGHT OF BAYONETS

Terrible Hand to Hand Encounter in the Trenches Before Russians Fled.

DEFEAT TURNED TO TRIUMPH

[Associated Press Cable to The Gazette.]

Tokyo, May 29.—(6 p. m.)—The details of the fighting at Kinchau emphasizes the heroic tenacity of the Japanese in their conduct at Nanshan hill. Nine successive times the Japanese charged the fortified heights in the face of a storm of death-dealing missiles, and in their last effort they carried the forts and trenches only after a bayonet-to-bayonet conflict with the Russians, who made a desperate, despairing struggle to beat back the oncoming hordes.

The final assault of the Japanese, in which they at last succeeded in taking possession, was marked by the most desperate hand-to-hand encounter that has thus far characterized the war.

The Japanese left, throughout the entire action until night, was exposed to an enfilading fire from the Russian infantry, a gunboat in Tailenwan bay and four nine-centimeter guns posted at Tafankchen.

At a critical moment the ammunition of the artillery ran low and it was decided to cast the remaining ammunition into one final desperate assault.

Fleet to the Rescue.

Fortunately, however, at the moment this decision was reached, the Japanese squadron at Kinchau bay, which had ceased bombarding when the infantry first moved forward, suddenly resumed the shelling of Nanshan hill.

Then it was that the issues of the day were determined—at a moment when the outcome was fluttering between success and defeat for Japan—at that moment was an almost certain repulse converted into victory so successful that the forces of the czar were swept into confusion and disorderly retreat. With every Japanese gun centering its fire upon the Nanshan forts, and trenches, the Japanese infantry sprang over the bodies of their dead comrades who had sacrificed their lives in the previous fruitless charges. The entire line rushed forward toward the Russian left where the fire of the Japanese squadron had proved most deadly and which was the first to weaken under the death-dealing bombardment. And it was there that the first breach was made in the human stonewall that all day had been an invincible barrier to the impetuous assaults of the assaulting forces.

Stain Wiped Away.

It was the fourth division of the Osaka men that stormed the Russian left. It had once been said that Osaka men were not brave. It will never be said again.

The first division of Tokyo, which had the center, and the third division of Nagoya, occupying the left and which had been exposed all day to the Russian fire against the front flank, now followed the example of the Osaka men and rushed forward, and the battle became transformed from an artillery duel into one of personal conflict, with the bayonet as the instrument of warfare.

On every parapet the restless, death-defying Japanese surged forward in increasing numbers, and hustling the Russians from their intrenchments, swept over the hill. At 7:30 o'clock, as the sun was sinking beneath the horizon, the flag of the land of the rising sun floated over the blood-sodden Nanshan hill, while the shouts of "Banzai" swelled from hill to hill, and re-echoed from squadron to fort.

The Japanese paid for their victory in 3,500 killed and wounded. To the Russians, the humiliation of defeat was intensified by the loss of 63 cannon and 10 machine guns, while lying dead in the forts and trenches were 500 men, the victims of the accuracy of Japanese long distance marksmanship and of close range fighting.

Beginning of Engagement.

Gen. Oku, in command of the Japanese, began his aggressive movement on the Russian position at midnight, on Wednesday. He assigned the fourth division to the right with instructions to swing around Kinchau and move south. He gave the first division the center and the left was allotted to the third division. During the night a terrible thunderstorm accompanied by a heavy rain broke over the advancing army and impeded the movements of the men. It had been planned to begin the fire at 4:30 o'clock in the morning, but a dense fog had followed the storm, and it was an hour later before all of the artillery under Gen. Uchiyama opened on Nanshan Hill. A detachment seized Kinchau castle and then the entire infantry force gradually moved forward.

The gunners on the fortified heights were not slow in giving smart response to the Japanese attack and soon a vigorous fire and counter fire was in progress, to which the big guns of the Japanese squadron lent noisy chime. At 6 o'clock the atmosphere had cleared up sufficiently for the naval marksmanship to work effectively. For three hours the shelling from bay and shore and the replying from the forts continued without interruption, and then the Russian fire abated.

The cessation of the firing on the hill was a signal for a forward movement of the troops below, and the attacking batteries changed their positions to secure better ranges. At 11 o'clock a zone varying from 300 to 5,500 yards in width separated the Japanese and Russian lines, and the rest of the day was spent by assailing forces in crossing the fire-swept zone.

A Russian gunboat in Talienwan bay opened fire on the Japanese left at 10 o'clock in the forenoon and continued firing for five hours. Five Russian

BUILDING PATH TO VICTORY ACROSS RICE FIELDS FOR JAPANESE ARMY IN KOREA

From the Illustrated London News.

JAPANESE MILITARY ENGINEERS CONSTRUCTING A ROUGH-TIMBER ROAD FOR TROOPS.

The success of the Korean campaign was due to the swift construction of good roads and bridges, which also secured the line of retreat in case of need. During the advance to the Yalu the Japanese engineers have proved their skill in improvising roads. Even the flooded rice fields proved no obstacle, for they felled trees and constructed log roads, as in this illustration. Many of the existing Korean roads have been practically remade.

OKU MAKES REPORT

Latest Figures Place His Losses at 3,500—Russians Left 500 Dead.

ST. PETERSBURG IS EXCITED

[Special Cable to The Gazette.]

Tokyo, May 29.—Gen. Oku, commanding the army attacking Kinchau, reports that in the attack on Nanshan hill the enemy consisted of one division of the field army and two batteries of field artillery, besides fortress artillery and marines. The Japanese force consisted of three divisions.

The fourth division, taking advantage of the enemy's left wing, which was weakened by the bombardment from our fleet at Kinchau bay, finally succeeded in carrying the enemy's position, while other divisions immediately followed it up. Thereupon the enemy retreated in confusion, exploding magazines at Tafangshin.

The trophies of the battle consisted of 68 guns and 10 machine guns, besides many other things. Our casualties are estimated at about 3,500. The enemy left on the battlefield over 500 dead bodies.

Although the war council will give out no information on the subject of Gen. Kuroki's movements, there have been rumors of fighting near Liao-Yang and further engagements on the Liao-Tung peninsula. No details, however, are given in either instance, so the reports are received with doubt.

Orders for Final Attack.

It is understood here that orders have been issued for the final attack on Port Arthur and that the preparations will be pushed forward as rapidly as consistent with reasonable precautions to guard against any failure in the plans for the investment of the Russian position.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 29.—(12:46 p. m.)—Intense interest is displayed in the Japanese reports of the Kinchau battle. The people in the streets almost mob newsboys to secure extras containing the dispatches. Crowds stood around the official bulletin boards awaiting the Russian versions, but none arrived.

The official world as well as the public is entirely dependent upon the Japanese for news. Further details are eagerly looked for, especially regarding losses. The prevailing conviction here is that the Japanese must have carried Nanshan at tremendous sacrifice. The accounts of the heroically stubborn defense made by the Russians, notwithstanding their position, subjected to the fire of artillery from the front and from warships on the flank, are a source of much satisfaction. Their own reports, the Russians say, could not have placed the fighting qualities of their soldiers in a better light than do those of the Japanese.

Don't Expect News.

But the admiralty and the war office are without news and frankly confess they do not expect to hear from the beleaguered garrison in Port Arthur again directly except by accident until the fortress had been relieved or surrendered or the war ended. Some native reports that drifted into headquarters at Liao-Yang and were forwarded here say that the Japanese lost many thousands.

Col. Novtzky of the general staff in an interview points out that Port Arthur, although generally denominated a fortress

FRIEND IN DISTRESS

Indian Girl Who Thought Killing at 500 Yards "Extenuating Circumstance."

PROBABLY DIED MILLIONAIRE

By WALTER J. CHRISTY.
(Staff Correspondent.)
[Special Telegram to The Gazette.]

Beaver, Pa., May 29.—Gathered this afternoon in Beaver were a group of men who had been Senator Quay's closest friends. They were reminded of incidents in the life of the colonel which made interesting stories for the listener.

Col. Samuel Moody chatted about the trip he and the senator made last November into Indian Territory. It showed that Mr. Quay was familiar with the leading men among the tribes and knew their history as he knew the history of the men in politics in Pennsylvania. During the conversation one of the gentlemen was reminded of a recent friendly act on the part of the senator toward a red man. A few months ago a pretty Indian girl, from somewhere away out west, journeyed to Washington to secure the kindly offices of Senator Quay in procuring a pardon for her brother. He had committed murder. Senator Quay listened to her story and then asked:

"Were there any extenuating circumstances connected with the shooting?"

"Yes, my brother killed at 500 yards," said the maiden.

This brought a ray of hope to the senator. He thought that any man who could kill at 500 yards would appeal to the president. Attorney General Knox was visited. Mr. Quay said: "I have never asked you for anything since you have been in office. I now want something. I desire a pardon for this Indian."

Indian Was Pardoned.

The case was carried to the president, and he was told of the extenuating circumstances. The Indian was pardoned. Senator Quay was constantly doing something for the red man. The last time he addressed the senate it was in behalf of the Indian. He then urged the passing of a bill carrying a certain appropriation for the Delaware tribe.

Senator Quay was always ready to give assistance to those in distress. The writer recalls an instance during the heat of the "Combine" fight of 1895. While seated in his library one evening, busy with the campaign, an old woman, a widow of a soldier, was admitted. She had traveled from a Western Pennsylvania county to interest him in getting her a pension. She told a story of the misery which comes with poverty. When she left it was with a lighter heart and the promise that her case would be attended to at once. Right then he wrote a letter to Washington and the promise was made good.

Not so long ago a woman sought the senator in his committee room at Washington. She told of a wayward boy, who two years ago had enlisted in the United States army and soon afterward deserted. He had entered the service under an assumed name in a western state. When he took "French" leave he returned to Pennsylvania and assumed his right name. Desirous of removing the taint from the boy's record, the mother sought the sen-

Congressman Curtis, Part Indian, Tells What Quay Did for Indians

To the Editor of The Gazette:

TOPEKA, KAS., May 29.—The late Senator Quay was one of the best friends the Indians ever had in congress. No Indian or tribe ever appealed to him in vain. The papers usually referred to his efforts in behalf of the Delawares, and it was through him that their affairs with the government were settled, but he helped "Big Jim's band," the Creeks and all others whenever he thought they needed assistance. When the Oklahoma statehood bill was being considered he insisted that all the rights of the Indians should be fully protected, and it was due to him more than any other one man that the provision prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors to Indians was made more stringent. While he was always ready to help the Indians, yet he never asked more than he thought they were legally and justly entitled to. In the death of Senator Quay the Indians lost a true friend, the Republican party a great leader and the nation one of its wisest legislators.

CHARLES CURTIS,
Representative in congress from First Kansas district.

TWO METHODS UP TO THE GOVERNOR

Federal and State Constitutions Differ on Filling a Senatorial Vacancy.

MEN WHO ARE MENTIONED

What is the message that ex-Senator J. Donald Cameron is supposed to have borne from Senator Quay, on his deathbed, to Gov. Pennypacker? What is the secret of the last conference held between the dying senator and Senator Penrose? The answer to these queries may have a large bearing on Senator Quay's successor. The state constitution, Section 4, Article II, says:

In case of a vacancy arising in the office of United States senator from this commonwealth, in a recess between sessions, the governor shall convene the two houses by proclamation on notice not exceeding 60 days, to fill the vacancy.

But the practice has been for the senate, in deciding questions relating to the filling of vacancies in that body, of going by the United States Constitution, and that document, article 1, section 3, paragraph 2, says:

And if vacancies (in the United States senate) happen by resignation or otherwise, during the recess of the legislature of any state, the chief executive thereof may make temporary appointments until the next meeting of the legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies.

Two Laws to Act Under.

According to the state constitution the governor "shall" convene the legislature, but under the national Constitution the governor "may" appoint. If the governor looks about him he will find that many state governors have made appointments under the clause just quoted, of the federal Constitution, irrespective of what the constitutions of their state may have said. In this connection it may be pointed out that it was under this clause that Gov. Stone claimed the right to appoint Senator Quay, and that the United States senate rejected the theory in not accepting Quay as a member, but the rejection was made on the ground that the case did not come under this clause, the legislature having failed of its duty in not electing a senator, deciding that as the legislature had the opportunity, right and duty to elect, the governor had no right to appoint.

The governor may, therefore, decide that as the United States fundamental law and the rules and practice of the senate justify him in making an appointment, as it would cost the state nearly $500,000 to convene the legislature, and as Quay's term would expire anyhow next January, when the legislature will be in session he can make an appointment.

Importance of the Message.

That is why the nature of the message from Quay to the governor through Cameron and Penrose may have a decided bearing on the succession to Quay. If the dying senator asked the governor

PENROSE'S FINE TRIBUTE TO QUAY

His Success Complete, Judged from Every Standpoint—Kind Words from Durham.

PHILADELPHIANS ARE COMING

The Pittsburgh Gazette Bureau.
Press Building.
PHILADELPHIA, PA., May 29.

Senator Penrose, who was at the Quay home when Senator Quay died, arrived in the city this morning from Beaver. He will return to Beaver tomorrow for the funeral. Senator Penrose tonight said:

"I feel the death of Senator Quay very keenly. It terminates an association extending over 20 years, an intimate personal and political association dating from the time I ran for the legislature in the Eighth ward, in which ward Senator Quay resided in 1883. His death is a great loss to the state and to the nation. He had a remarkably wide political experience, and his knowledge on political matters, particularly those of party management and important issues, was probably unequaled, even if approached, by any man in American politics living today. He possessed most of the elements of true greatness and will doubtless be better understood by the general public in the years to come. He was probably one of the best read members of the senate in which body there are several notable for attainments of learning.

Wielded Great Influence.

"No member of the senate wielded a greater influence, and no Republican perhaps stood higher with the present administration than did he. After many battles his political efforts were crowned with complete success and absolute peace and harmony prevailed in Pennsylvania. Had he lived he would have been re-elected with the acquiescence of those who formerly opposed him. He died at a ripe age, passing the period of three-score and ten, and judged by every standard of success, his seems to have been complete."

In response to many telegrams soliciting some expression on the death of Senator Quay, Insurance Commissioner Durham, who is now on his way home from California, today telegraphed the following to Capt. J. Clayton Erb, his secretary, and authorized its publication:

"The death of Senator Quay is an irreparable loss to the nation, and especially to the state of Pennsylvania."

"Setting aside partisan or factional bias, anyone who has studied the career of this man must admit his genius as a statesman and his force and wonderful resources as a party leader. He was successful because he kept in touch with the people. His direction of the national campaign of 1888 made the election of Harrison to the presidency possible under adverse circumstances.

"His masterful tactics in the United

Tomorrow the public will not be admitted to the Quay residence. Close friends of the family will be permitted to call. Today the body of the senator is resting on his bed in the room above the library. A few of his close friends from Pittsburgh called this afternoon and were permitted to see him. Judge John B. Steel of Greensburg, was here also. Aside from these gentlemen there were few callers at the Quay residence.

In all of the churches this morning the preachers referred in prayer to the loss the state and nation has suffered by the death of the senator.

Telegrams of condolence continue to pour into the Quay home. The family has decided that none of them will be given to the public. So far nothing has been heard from the senator's Indian friends. Their residences are in such remote parts of the union and Canada, that it takes considerable time for communications to pass from Beaver to them and return. Telegrams notifying them of the death of their great chief have been sent.

Durham Cannot Attend.

A telegram has been received from Insurance Commissioner I. W. Durham. He is at Pasadena, Cal. While he is on his way home, it will of course be impossible for him to reach Beaver in time for the funeral. Today a complete list of the senatorial committee that will attend the funeral was received by W. F. Wright. The members follow: Senators, Penrose, chairman, Pennsylvania; Frye, Maine; Aldrich, Rhode Island; Allison, Iowa; Alger, Michigan; Allee, Delaware; Elkin, West Virginia; Gallinger, New Hampshire; Hansbrough, North Dakota; Foraker, Ohio; Mitchell, Oregon; Platt, New York; Stewart, Nevada; Gorman, Maryland; Blackburn, Kentucky; Daniel, Virginia; DuBois, Idaho; Tillman, South Carolina; Teller, Colorado.

The entire Pennsylvania delegation will represent the house.

D. M. Ransdell, sergeant-at-arms of the senate, is in charge of the arrangements for the joint committee. Gov. Pennypacker will be here and it is probable most or the other state officials will attend the funeral.

The Quay lot in the Beaver cemetery lies near the center of the beautiful burial grounds. In it are the graves of the parents of the senator, five of the senator's children and a niece. There is a plain marble shaft over the grave of the father and mother. Half way up the shaft is the name "Quay." At the base are these inscriptions:

Inscriptions on Grave Stones.

Rev. A. R. Quay. Born May 22, 1822. Died September 22, 1858.

Catherine McC., wife of Rev. A. R. Quay. Born October 1, 1790. Died March 25, 1868.

On the two footstones are the words "Father" and "Mother." In a row are the five graves of the children of Senator and Mrs. Quay. They all died when they were quite young. Five children survive the senator. The inscriptions on the plain marble slabs erected over the graves of the children are as follows:

John B. Quay. Born June 20, 1856. Died November 24, 1856.

Stanley A. Quay. Born January 27, 1858. Died April 27, 1858.

Elizabeth S. Quay. Born January 28, 1860. Died March 1, 1862.

Sarah Quay. Born January 27, 1862. Died November 16, 1862.

Jerome, son of M. S. and A. B. Quay. Born January 11, 1865. Died August 9, 1876.

Miss Sarah T. Preutiss, a niece of the senator, who died in 1885, is also buried in the family lot.

State Senate Committee.

Word has been received that President Sproul, of the Pennsylvania state senate, has appointed the following committee to attend the funeral: William C. Sproul, Chester; Samuel H. White, Beaver; John M. Scott and John C. Grady, Philadelphia; Henry N. Cumings, Warren; John S. Fisher, Indiana; Benjamin K. Foust, Union; John E. Fox, Dauphin; Cyrus E. Woods, Westmoreland; John W. Business Will Be Suspended During Funeral—Whole Valley May Show Sorrow.

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

NEW BRIGHTON, PA., May 29.—The movement to have all business in the Beaver valley suspended during the funeral of Senator Quay Tuesday was inaugurated here last night. The other towns will take up the matter and it is possible that during the services not a store will be open, not a factory wheel turn nor a street car run. These resolutions were adopted at a public meeting this afternoon:

"We, the citizens of New Brighton, Beaver county, Pa., publicly assembled this 29th day of May, 1904, record with sorrow the fact of the death of our friend and neighbor, Senator Matthew Stanley Quay. We realize in his death a great public loss to the county, the state and the nation, as well as a personal bereavement to the people of this community, who have enjoyed such pleasant relations with him through many years. His public services have been varied and great. By his ancestry, bound up with the history of our commonwealth, by his achievements as soldier, as county and state official, as statesman and leader of public affairs, business, social, political and financial, he settled up before he died. On Friday he signed his will bequeathing his estate to his children.

STATE BUILDING DRAPED FOR QUAY

The Governor Will Return from Gettysburg in Time to Go to Beaver.

NO BUILDING FOR LEGISLATURE

THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE BUREAU.
HARRISBURG, PA., May 29.

The executive building today was draped in mourning for Senator Quay and all business in the departments of state will be suspended until after the funeral.

Gov. Pennypacker left with Attorney General Carson and Cols. Haldeman and Beitler this morning for Gettysburg to preside at the Memorial day exercises. He will return tomorrow in time to take the midnight train for Beaver to attend the Quay funeral, at which it is expected he will be one of the honorary pallbearers. Private Secretary Wharton will accompany the governor. Some of the state officials will be unable to attend the funeral owing to their engagements to make Memorial day addresses. Among the state officials who will go to the funeral are Secretary of the Commonwealth Frank Fuller, Secretary of Internal Affairs Isaac B. Brown, Auditor General Snyder, Public Building and Grounds Superintendent Shumaker and Factory Inspector Delaney.

The board of public buildings and grounds, of which the governor is president, is confronted with the problem of finding a suitable place for the holding of an extra session of the legislature for the election of a United States senator to succeed Senator Quay. The new capitol cannot be put in condition for use before late in the fall, which makes it necessary that the board find other quarters. There is at present no available building in Harrisburg which can be leased for a short period. This matter will be considered by the board before the governor issues the call for an extra session.

CLEVELAND BELIEVES A. B. PARKER WILL WIN

eyes twinkled with merriment at the poet's hits at Democrats and Republicans, and when he had finished he laughed heartily in appreciation of the pointedness of the foil with which the author had punctured one of the foibles of all political parties. Seated in the library a few minutes later Mr. Cleveland gave approval to these further expressions of his opinion, as written out and submitted to him:

"This St. Louis convention, I believe, will see in Judge Parker a man for whom every Democrat and the great body of independent voters can vote unreservedly, but whether he shall be nominated or not, his candidacy has been a blessing to the party, for the energetic exploitation of his name during the last year has made certain Democracy's return to fundamental principles. In regard to the platform to be adopted by the convention, my views, I believe, are pretty well understood. It should be short, treating only of the strongest points at issue, and I am pleased to note that this opinion, as evidenced by the expressions from Democratic leaders and newspapers, is growing. There is particular reason why this platform should be short and strong and thoroughly bottomed upon fundamental Democratic doctrines, if Judge Parker is to be the party candidate.

Platform Must Not Be Weak.

"The two points of attack in a political campaign are the candidate and the platform. In the candidate the vulnerable point so much attention will be paid to the platform. But when, as in the case of Judge Parker, the candidate cannot be assailed upon any supportable ground, the platform is sure to be studied minutely and critically by our opponents, and must be so constructed as to be wholly free from weak points."

In speaking of specific planks this platform should contain, as representative of fundamental and unquestioned Democratic doctrine, Mr. Cleveland named among others, tariff reform, in favor of distinct declaration of the party's intentions in the matter of bestowing independence upon the Filipinos; economy in public expenditure and honesty in the public service."

While not permitted to quote him directly upon the detailed lines along which these several planks should be drawn, the correspondent learned enough of his opinions during talks with him to be able to give a fair outline of his beliefs. In regard to tariff reform Mr. Cleveland feels that, if his successor shall sincerely intend, a declaration somewhat like that made by Senator Gorman of Maryland last week would meet all requirements. This declaration was, it will be recalled, that the tariff should be revised in a spirit of conservatism which, while inflicting no injuries upon established industries, will lessen the burden of taxation upon the people. In taking away the power which it is asserted monopoly now has to levy excessive tributes.

His View on Philippines.

"The occupation of the Philippines was incidental to our interference on behalf of Cuba, and I hold that the principles that governed us in the main event should govern us in the incidental consequences," expresses the former president's ideas relative to the Philippines, an opinion which may be supplemented with this:

"The Filipinos are human beings and if, as the Republicans say, they are intended ultimately for independence, there should be held out to them through unequivocal declarations, the stimulating hope of freedom."

Public expenditures are regarded by Mr. Cleveland as a cankerous growth undermining the strength of the nation and becoming so dangerous as to demand drastic treatment, while his reference to honesty in the public service has an unmistakable meaning. Not being one of Judge Parker's advisers, Mr. Cleveland does not presume to say whether his silence should be broken or not. He assumes that the New Yorker is following able counsel, and while not undertaking to say where rests the balance of good judgment in such a case, believes that if Judge Parker is nominated his present silence will greatly aid the party.

Should Judge Parker be nominated Mr. Cleveland will give to him loyal and earnest support, though he makes no pledge that he will engage in the rough-and-tumble phases of the campaign. He is getting pretty well along in years and never was much of a campaign manager, even when his own fortunes were at stake. But in this year, with Judge Parker as the candidate, Grover Cleveland will use his influence, wherever it will be of avail, unceasingly and in whatever manner will prove of the greatest value to the cause.

Rejoicing in the redemption of the Democracy from Bryanism, he has only one political wish, and that is to see his party restored to power in Washington.

ENTIRE PENNSYLVANIA DELEGATION IS NAMED

Speaker Cannon Appoints Them to Represent House at Funeral of Quay.

[BY PRIVATE WIRE TO THE GAZETTE.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 29.—Sergeant-at-arms Ransdell of the senate was notified today that Speaker Cannon had appointed the entire Pennsylvania delegation in the house as a committee to attend the funeral of Senator Quay at Beaver Tuesday afternoon. The Pennsylvania members will meet the senators designated by President Pro Tem Frye at Pittsburgh Tuesday morning and take the special train to Beaver at 1 o'clock. Mr. Ransdell has secured a private car that will be attached to the Pennsylvania train leaving here at 7:45 tomorrow night for Pittsburgh, and any member of the senate and house committee who is in Washington will accompany him to Pittsburgh on that car. On Tuesday this car will be attached to the special train for Beaver.

An appropriate floral design will be secured by Mr. Ransdell on behalf of the senate to be placed upon the coffin of Senator Quay. The arrangements for this have not yet been made, but it will probably be prepared in Pittsburgh, as Mr. Ransdell will arrive there early Tuesday morning in time to have an elaborate floral design made.

STATE LOSES HER FOREMOST CITIZEN

Pittsburgh Times' Editorial on the Death of Senator M. S. Quay.

THE GREATEST OF HIS DAY

The Pittsburgh Times will this morning publish the following editorial on the death of Senator Matthew Stanley Quay:

By the death of Matthew Stanley Quay the state of Pennsylvania loses her foremost citizen. Yet the contradictions of his character and career were such that you may today search the public prints in vain for a review of his life and work that will be at once adequate, just and entirely truthful. For Senator Quay was no ordinary man, and therefore if we halt at his bier and follow the ordinary usage, which is prone to exaggerate the virtues of the departed and ignore those things which in life properly provoked criticism and antagonism, we may evolve something altogether lovely, but it will be only a pleasing fiction or a colorless picture of one who half a century has stood before his fellow men as the embodiment of vigorous and tireless activity.

Over and above all else Mr. Quay stands out as a political general. He was easily the foremost politician of his day. He had been in the business for 50 years, and it is this fact, it seems to us, that accounts for his marvelous hold upon the machine which he created and managed. Many students of politics have endeavored to explain in newspapers and magazines the sources of Quay's power, and they have ascribed to magnetism, mysticism and manipulation potentialities that we believe are based upon other grounds. The truth is that Mr. Quay made politics his life work, his business, his science, and it was to him well-nigh an exact science.

For five decades he had no other occupation than politics. He had during almost that entire period held public office, it is true, but he never took office for the salary, nor for the occupation, but rather that it might serve him as a coign of vantage in political management and achievement. Other men merely played politics. With them it was a side line or a diversion. Their partisan activity was confined to a few months, weeks or days in a year, and then they actually marveled that they could not accomplish as much as Quay, and sought all manner of explanations for his mastery, entirely forgetting that he was a politician every day, every month and every year, and that from that time during which he first tasted the sweets of political exhilaration he had never taken his hand off the lever of leadership. He studied men, tried them and proved them; he sought out and courted the influences which are powerful factors in shaping public policies and affairs; he early learned and never overlooked the importance of all manner of legislation; he had a keen and discerning appreciation of the relation of business to politics and of the power of politics in business.

Briefly stated, Mr. Quay ascertained and made his every power of life bear, in bearing upon politics, and he never faltered in his choice of a vehicle when he rode to win. His unflagging political work and his knowledge of the sources of power and causes of weakness, fortified by the most systematic methods for organizing and controlling. He never trusted to chance, nor has it ever been truthfully said of him that he owed his triumphs to the favor of gentle fate of this or that lieutenant, as has been the case with many men in public life. When it came down to a contest Quay's was the master mind, his the conception, the counsel, skill, and, eventually, his the triumph; though, of course, he had an army of followers, some devoted, others truculent, most of them loyal and all of them useful. And in the end he went down in defeat unbefriended, undisputed in control of the great Republican party in Pennsylvania.

There was another phase of Mr. Quay's character that has always puzzled, amazed, and this was his remarkable faculty for securing public approval by spectacular appeal to the people. It is well known that he despised the namby-pamby in politics. He had no use for the academic theorists, professional reformers or the platitudinous preachers who seek to save a party by passing resolutions and then forget to pay their taxes and don't know where the poll is. Yet who among us will soon forget what Quay did when the cards ran against him? Witness his appeal to the men in blouses, his frantic declaration that he would battle with the counties against the aggrandizement of the big cities of Pennsylvania; his deploring of the increasing use of money in politics, his leading part in the public declaration against corporate greed; his pathetic picture of himself as the dying oak when his seat in the senate was jeopardized. Here he was using the very arts which he condemned when others employed them, but had tried to use them, but with this difference, that for him the time was opportune, and he knew it and made the most of it. And so he was the defiance of Boutin, and with his resignation from Hoyt's cabinet. Out of adverse conditions he almost invariably succeeded in wresting personal advantage and political prestige. This peculiar quality never failed him. It was manifest in 1902, when he made Judge Pennypacker the nominee for governor, and it was exemplified again this year, when John S. Elkin was made his life work, his business, his science, and it was to him well-nigh an exact science.

YOSHINO'S CREW BRAVE TO DEATH

Story of the Sinking of Japanese Cruiser Told—Cheered to the Last.

RUSSIAN LETTERS CAPTURED

[ASSOCIATED PRESS CABLE TO THE GAZETTE.]

Tokyo, May 29, 5 p. m.—Certain Russian correspondence which has been intercepted by the Japanese at the blockade of Port Arthur, gives the information that some Russian torpedo boat destroyers have been sunk by mines outside of Port Arthur, as well as details of the placing by the Russians of the mines which effected the destruction of the Japanese battleship Hatsuse on May 15.

The sixth Japanese squadron, which was blockading Port Arthur, overhauled and searched a junk and seized a number of letters written by Russian officers. One letter said that a torpedo boat destroyer had successfully placed a series of mines during the night which preceded the loss of the Hatsuse and continuing, tells of the loss of some Russian torpedo boat destroyers. How many is not mentioned, but it is indicated that there were at least two.

The heavy loss of life which accompanied the sinking of the Japanese cruiser Yoshino, as a result of colliding with the Japanese cruiser Kasuga on May 15, was due to the smashing of five of her boats by falling masts. When the ships came together, collision mats were used and a tarpaulin was placed over the hole, but it was impossible to stop the inrush of water.

The ship settled quickly, listing to the starboard. Capt. Sayski ordered the crew to the upper deck, where they manned the boats. Five boats were lowered on the starboard side and one on the port side, but before they were cleared the ship lurched to the starboard and commenced to sink.

The masts and davits smashed all five of the boats on the starboard side. Capt. Sayski remained on the bridge and cried "banzai" to the sailors as they were entering the boats. When last seen he was shaking hands with Commander Hirowatari and bidding him farewell.

At this moment Lieut. Nato sprang overboard and swam to the only cutter which had escaped from the wreck. He rowed to the cruiser Kasuga and returned with three boats, but no trace of the Yoshino or her crew could be found, with the exception of six men who had already been rescued by boats from the cruiser Chitose.

The fog was so dense that the searchlight of the Kasuga, though not more than 60 meires distant, was only faintly discernible. The Kasuga struck the Yoshino on the port side near the engines, and the force of the blow was so great that the dynamos and her lighting plant were destroyed, leaving the ship in darkness. The portrait of the emperor aboard the Yoshino was rescued and carried to the Kasuga.

Commander Honda, who commanded the fireship Totomi in the successful sealing of Port Arthur, arrived here today. Honda and the entire crew of the Totomi were deafened by their terrible experience. The explosions and awful cannonade ruptured the tympanums of their ears. Commander Honda may recover the hearing of one ear, but he will be permanently deaf in the other. Honda and his comrades did not discover their unfortunate condition until they were leaving the ship. He shouted his orders to his men, yet he failed to hear his own voice, and he was forced to make signs indicating his orders in order successfully to bring the crew back to Vice Admiral Togo's squadron.

MEN OF OSAKA WON A VICTORY

steamers attempted to land their crews near Hung Tu Ai, but the third division stopped them. In the meantime four heavy guns at Tafangcheng found the range of the third division and kept shelling it until 7 o'clock in the evening. The artillery with the third division vainly endeavored to reach these guns, but failed on account of the darkness.

In the main attack the Japanese artillery continued shelling Nanshan hill, seeking to destroy entanglements and otherwise clear the way of the infantry, but every time the infantry advanced the awful Russian fire drove them back.

The Critical Moment.

In the meantime the Russians had reinforced their right under cover of the two field batteries previously withdrawn from Nanshan, with fresh infantry, whose fire enfiladed a considerable portion of the entire Japanese line.

Very critical at this time was the situation for Gen. Oku's forces, for, at the wavering of the line, under the reinforcement of the Russian infantry, came the reports from the Japanese batteries that the ammunition was almost exhausted. Gen. Oku reports that he knew he could not hope to continue the battle much longer, so decided to make an assault in force, regardless of casualities. Then the artillery opened fire with the remaining ammunition and the first division courageously assaulted the Russian center, only to be beaten back.

During this time the Fourth regiment artillery had been pounding the Russian left. Suddenly the Japanese squadron began pouring shells into the Russian left and its noisy awakening was succeeded by the onslaught of the fourth division on the demoralized left wing of the defenders, and the victory was won.

Forced to Retreat.

The beaten forces, badly shattered, retreated toward Port Arthur, exploding the Tafangchen magazines as they receded. A detachment of Japanese infantry pursued the retreating Russians far into the night.

Gen. Oku estimates that the force of the enemy consisted of one line division, two batteries of field artillery and marines.

Gen. Oku telegraphs his opinion that the Russians intended to check the Japanese advance at Nanshan in order to protect Port Arthur. Besides the big guns a miscellaneous assortment of Russian property was captured.

Gen. Oku concludes his report by heartily thanking the navy for its co-operation. The Japanese captured a number of Russian officers and men.

ENGINEERS WILL VISIT PITTSBURGH

British Association Coming. Foreigners Will Place Substantial Orders in This City.

LOCAL FIRM GAINS CONTRACT

THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE BUREAU.
Herald Building, Herald Square.
NEW YORK, May 29.

Nearly 300 prominent British engineering experts will visit Pittsburgh within the next few days and nearly 1,000 more are coming over between now and the early fall. Those that are now on their way are members of the British Institution of Mechanical Engineers, whose president is J. Hartley Wicksteed. They will hold a series of meetings here conjointly with the spring convention of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. Afterward they will visit the large manufacturing plants in the Pittsburgh district. About 250 members of the British Society of Chemical Industry are expected to arrive here about the first week in September when a four days' convention will be held here. The most of the members of this society will also visit the Iron city.

The members of the British Institution of Civil Engineers, numbering fully 200, will arrive here on the Cunard liner Etruria, September 10. Pittsburgh will be visited. Upwards of 100 members of the British Institution of Electrical Engineers will also make a trip to Pittsburgh in September. The Westinghouse works will be their goal. Some 600 members of the British Iron and Steel institute will come over in October and will make a special trip to Pittsburgh.

Will Place Orders in Pittsburgh.

Quite a number of prominent foreigners will also visit the Pittsburgh district within the next week or so in order to place substantial orders for various material, machinery, etc., and to inspect the big iron and steel plants. The list including the names of some of the pioneer introducers of Yankee labor-saving devices in Europe: Arthur Robert of the Buenos Ayres firm of A. Mantels, the third largest buyer of American machinery in the Argentine Republic. The firm of Jas. Love & Co., proprietary of Melbourne, Australia, and Henri Bendictus of Antwerp, Belgium. Arthur Busse, the chief engineer of the Grosse Berliner Strasserbahn of Berlin, the largest electric traction system in Europe—is also on his way to Pittsburgh and M. Kodma, chief engineer of the Tokyo Electric Railway Company of Tokyo, Japan, is now on his way to inspect the Pittsburgh electric lines.

Will Open Offices in Buenos Ayres.

B. G. Wassermann of J. Wassermann & Co. of New York, which concern is closely affiliated with the big German commission house of the same name, will leave early next month for South America to open branch offices in Buenos Ayres, where Pittsburgh manufactures are expected to be handled on an extensive scale. The manager of the Buenos Ayres branch will be Mr. Glocke, formerly manager of the European department of the great mercantile house of G. Amsinck & Co.

Davenant Rodger, the Chilean government railroad commissioner, is now here and is expected to place some very substantial contracts for Pittsburgh-made rails, locomotives, etc. The Chilean government has drawn up an ambitious program calling for the expenditure of about $60,000,000 gold on public works. Contracts amounting to over $30,000,000 will be initiated during this season, including the trans-Andean railway, improvements on Valparaiso harbor, the sewerage and paving of Santiago and several hundred miles of railway.

Pittsburgh Firm Secures Contract.

James McNeil & Bro. Co. of Pittsburgh, has secured a large contract for 12-inch cast pipe from the city council of Toronto, Canada. The accepted price was $14.48 a foot. The Canadian Foundry Company of Toronto tendered at a higher price, $14.96 a foot, and the Toronto board of control, which is composed of aldermen, accepted the Canadian company's tender. This action of the board was reversed, however, by the full city council and on a vote of 18 to 2 the Pittsburgh offer was the one accepted. The Canadian company required seven months in which to do the work, as against 45 days named by the McNeil concern.

Mexican advices state that some wonderful engineering work is just being completed in the way of deep mining by the Miller & Sibley Co. of Bradford, Pa., at Topia, a mining town located in the state of Durango. The Bradford people, who own the Madrugada mining property, have driven a tunnel more than a mile in length, for the purpose of crosscutting a vein that was supposed to be at the 1,800-foot level. This was done successfully and a very large body of ore was discovered. The ore is said to be of a lead silver variety of a moderate grade but which requires transportation facilities to be made valuable.

Ore Body is Large.

It is claimed that the ore body is one of the largest ever proved in the southern republic for it shows strongly at the 1,800-foot level, proving that there is no diminution of the chutes as the veins descend. The one difficulty about the property is the lack of transportation facilities, which, like all the mining camps of the remoter parts of Mexico, are deficient. The ore has to be carried by muleback over the rocky trails of Culiacan or Santiago Papasquiero, where it is shipped to market. This is a very expensive process and practically kills all the profits of the mine.

Topia is an old mining camp situated on the west side of the Sierra Madres, half way between Santiago Papasquiero and Culiacan. The capital of the state is Sinaloa. It is at an altitude of 6,000 feet above the sea level. The country is very rugged and strongly mineralized. There have been several good mines developed in the region, but the one upon which the most extensive work has been done is that owned by the Bradford concern. The owners are making money on the Madrugada property, despite the great difficulties to be overcome.

NEWARK YOUTH MET DEATH ON TROLLEY WIRE

NEWARK, O., May 29.—(Special.)—Eagerness to see the city of Newark from a treetop cost the life today of Joseph Long, aged 17, a son of C. L. H. Long, city editor of the Newark American-Tribune. The boy had gone about two miles south of Newark to spend the day. The fancy seized him to climb a high tree. He lost his balance before reaching the top and in falling struck the high-tension feed wire of the interurban trolley line and was instantly killed.

ST. LOUIS, May 29.—A detachment of police was needed at the First Presbyterian church today to control the curious crowd that assembled to see Miss Alice Roosevelt pass into Sunday service. So unostentatious was Miss Roosevelt's departure after the service that but few recognized her, and nearly 100 women stood for half an hour in the rain, thinking she was still in the church.

MISSOURI HEROES HIGHLY PRAISED

President and Secretary Moody Write Letters, Accompanying Report of Inquiry.

HIGHLY COMMEND MONSSEN

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS TO THE GAZETTE.]

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Secretary Moody has issued a general order containing certain extracts from the report of the Missouri court of inquiry regarding the conduct of the officers and men at the time of the accident on board that vessel, April 13; letters from the president to the navy department regarding the bravery of the officers and men of the Missouri, the extraordinary heroism shown by Chief Boatswain's Mate M. Monssen and Acting Gunner R. E. Cox, and also a letter from the president to the department, expressing his satisfaction at the behavior of the chaplain of the Missouri, Father Gleeson, at the time of the accident. After reading the memorandum of the commander-in-chief about the accident, the president sent this letter to the department:

"White House, Washington, May 14, 1904.
To the Navy Department:

"The memorandum of Rear Admiral A. J. Barker, commander-in-chief of the North Atlantic fleet, of April 20, upon the accident on board the Missouri, has been laid before me by the navy department. In it Admiral Barker says:

"The disaster was appalling, but it developed heroes. History records no more heroic act than that of J. Monessen, who crawled through a hole into the burning magazine to put out the flames. The conduct of the captain, officers and crew was superb, showing excellent discipline and marked personal courage."

Behaved Well in Crisis.

Although we must all of us be saddened at so lamentable a catastrophe, and though every effort must be made and every energy bent to minimize the chance of its recurrence, yet it is a matter of profound gratification to all who are proud of the American navy that the officers and men concerned should have behaved so well under such trying circumstances. The weapons with which men now make war on the ocean are so terrible, while the organization of our warships is at once so delicate and so formidable as to make thorough training and practice in their use both indispensable and dangerous. Such war material would in battle be utterly useless unless those handling them knew by actual experience their capabilities and how to utilize to the highest degree those capabilities, and this power can only be acquired by practice, from which a certain amount of risk is inseparable. As I have already said, every effort must be made to minimize this risk. But after all such effort is made a certain amount of risk will remain, and this risk must be faced in the same spirit in which the risk of actual battle is faced. This is precisely the spirit which was shown in the fleet under Admiral Barker's command, markedly on the Missouri, but also on the other vessels. For many minutes after the accident occurred on the Missouri every one aboard her knew that at any minute she might go to the bottom; yet there was no flinching and no disorder among her crew.

Every Man Showed Courage.

Although the veterans aboard her were less numerous than the recruits, every man continued to perform his duty with a cool self-possession and courage which gives us a right to the highest confidence as to the way in which any emergency in battle or otherwise would be met. Similarly we have a right to be proud of the fact that our system of target practice the marksmanship, if anything, showed a slight improvement after the accident. It was a good thing to have the Texas, for instance, as soon as she had received aboard the Missouri, steam out to resume practice with the great guns and to make one of the best records that had yet been made.

I congratulate and thank Admiral Barker and those under him for the showing that has been made. I have written separately concerning Capt. Cowles, Acting Gunner R. E. Cox, Chief Gunner's Mate M. Monssen and Surgeon Stokes Galloway.

(Signed) THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

In the course of a letter to the secretary of the navy, after reading the report of the court of inquiry, the president said, regarding the victims of the accident:

Died For Their Country.

These men died for their country, as honorably as if they had died in battle against an enemy. We mourn their fate, but we mourn it only as we mourn those who fell bravely at the post of duty. The accident was due to no fault of theirs or their comrades. It was one of those accidents against which we must guard with ceaseless vigilance and which we must discover means of averting, but the risk of which cannot be entirely prevented under the conditions of preparation for modern warfare, and which, therefore, must to this extent be accepted as we accept the risk of battle itself. The lives of these men pass as part of their service of their country and their deaths were in her honor. Living and dying, they showed that high quality in duty which can be rendered only by those in whom the determination to do duty well has become part of their very being. On behalf of the nation, I pay tribute of honor to the brave dead who died so nobly.

I desire, furthermore, to thank Capt. Cowles, and through him the officers and enlisted men under him, for having so borne themselves in this great emergency as to deserve what I now say of them in the language above quoted. I congratulate the nation because our ships are manned by men who at such a time can make such a showing, and that the honor of the nation will ever be safe in their hands.

Yours truly, THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Men Further Honored.

To each one of the officers and men reported by the court as deserving, and to Chaplain Gleeson, the navy department sent a copy of the general order, with a commendatory letter.

Specially commendatory letters have been written by the secretary to Cox, Monssen and Schepke and to Monssen and Schepke medals of honor have been awarded. Because the law does not provide for the awarding of a medal of honor to an officer of the navy, acting Gunner Cox could not be awarded one. The general order concludes with these words of the secretary:

Little can be added to heighten the praise which all who read this order will bestow upon the conduct of all concerned in this trying occasion, but the department feels that the service should be congratulated on the possession of such officers and men.

Secretary Moody has also written a letter to Rear Admiral Barker transmitting a letter from the president congratulating the commander-in-chief for his fine conduct and that of those under his command in connection with the Missouri accident. In each case the department has forwarded the letter of the president accompanied by one from the secretary.

DALNY IS SEIZED BY THE JAPANESE

is in reality an entrenched camp whereof Kinchau was only an advanced improvised position. It would be unwise to judge of the strength of the permanent connected fortifications around Port Arthur by Kinchau. These fortifications, he said, support each other scientifically. Operations against them will require the most careful, systematic preparation.

A correspondent has just returned from Port Arthur. He has been over, and is thoroughly familiar with the forts and defences there. His opinion is that the fortress cannot be taken except by systematic siege operations that will require many months.

"Unless the Japanese are able to carry it in less than three months," the correspondent says, "they will be too late, as Gen. Kuropatkin will have enough men to send an army to relieve the garrison. Fock is a great fighter. Stoessel has 40,000 men, including the sailors on the warships. The garrison is provisioned for a year."

The correspondent also explains that the abrupt declivity in the rear of the position at Nanshan made it impossible for Gen. Fock to take away heavy guns when he retired.

ST. BERNARD DOG CHEWED DIRECTOR

Henry Hunneshagen's Face Was Frightfully Lacerated by the Family Pet.

FIERCE BATTLE FOR A LIFE

Henry Hunneshagen, director of the Allegheny department of charities, nearly became the victim of a sudden savage [illegible] a huge St. Bernard dog that [illegible] the family pet for years. As it is, his face is frightfully lacerated and it will be several days before he will be able to leave his home.

The dog, which is a valuable animal, had never before shown an ugly disposition, but when Mr. Hunneshagen went to the door of his home at 67 Spring Garden avenue late Saturday night to put the animal in its quarters, the brute sprang at him and sunk his teeth in his face. The weight of the animal threw Mr. Hunneshagen to the ground. He struggled to free himself and succeeded for a moment, but the dog returned to the attack and again caught him by the face and hung on. Members of the family rushed to his assistance, but the brute's jaws had to be practically forced open to secure his release. The animal then had to be beaten away with clubs.

The director's face is badly torn, the brute's teeth sinking into his face across the nose, forehead, eye and cheek.

A physician was called and the wounds were cauterized at once so that no danger is anticipated.

The dog is not mad and its attack cannot be accounted for. Heretofore it has been gentle and greatly attached to his master. The dog will be killed today.

VICTIM OF TETANUS PUZZLING DOCTORS

Man in Allegheny General Hospital Lives for Days After the Physicians Give Up Hope.

Local physicians are taking an interest in the case of Charles Young, who has been lingering between life and death at the Allegheny General hospital since last Friday night. Young is suffering with lockjaw and when he was admitted Friday night it was said by the hospital physicians that he could not live 12 hours.

The man, whose home is in Grand Island, Neb., had the big toe on his right foot amputated about a month ago. He was on his way to Bellefonte to go to work last Friday night when he left the train at the Fort Wayne station in Allegheny. He was suffering terribly and was sent by the Allegheny police to the hospital.

The physicians pronounced his case hopeless and said that had he been admitted several hours earlier the amputation of his leg might, perhaps, have saved his life. Since then there has been no perceptible change in Young's condition. Liquid food is given him and he is evidently in no worse condition than when he was admitted.

The physicians are puzzled and are hoping to save Young's life. Several years ago a similar case was treated. The patient had reached the stage of tetanus, from which the physicians said there was no escape from death, yet the man recovered. It is thought that perhaps Young's case will be similar.

ROBBED IN A CELL.

Charge Against a Prisoner Is Changed During the Night.

Jerry Clowry of Fourteenth street and Steve Devanney, 1900 Penn avenue, were locked up in the same cell at the Penn avenue police station, on Saturday night, charged with being drunk.

About midnight Devanney accused Clowry of stealing $1.20 from him while he lay asleep on the plank. The discussion attracted Sergt. William Wallace who searched Clowry and found the money on him.

At the hearing before Magistrate Kirby Clowry was fined $10 and costs, the charge against him having been changed from drunkenness to suspicious person. Devanney was fined $1 and costs.

EAGER PICNICKER GOT CUT REACHING FOR SANDWICH

John H. W. Hahn of Carbon street, Mt. Oliver, had his hand cut at a picnic near Mt. Lebanon yesterday. Casper Tuset was cutting sandwiches and showing his dexterity, when Hahn became tired waiting and reached for one of the sandwiches. He received a gash across the hand which took several stitches to close.

COLORED LODGE MEETING CAUSED GREAT EXCITEMENT

When Shots Were Fired in Initiation Exercises, Police Thought East Liberty Postoffice Was Being Robbed and Called Out Reserves.

Residents in the vicinity of the junction of Frankstown and Penn avenues were thrown into a state of excitement shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday morning by hearing a half dozen revolver shots fired in rapid succession, and for a time it was thought that an attempt was being made to loot the East Liberty station of the Pittsburgh postoffice at 6200 Penn avenue. The reserves from the East End police station were called out, and it was finally discovered that the excitement was caused by the initiation exercises of a colored lodge of Odd Fellows.

The first floor of the Vilsack building, at 6200 Penn avenue, is occupied by the branch postoffice, while the top story is devoted to lodge room purposes. The colored Odd Fellows' lodge had a large class of new members to install Saturday night and great preparations were made for the event. Throughout the evening they made considerable noise, but attracted little attention.

About 1 o'clock the lodge room was darkened to aid in carrying out some mysterious degree of the initiation. For the next four hours even the policeman on the beat heard no sounds from the lodge room, and concluded that the meeting was over.

All was quiet in the neighborhood until a few minutes before 5 o'clock. Then the reverie of the policeman and the slumbers of the neighborhood were broken by a series of shots that sounded like the reports of cannon on the stillness of the morning. A moment later cries of "Kill him," "Don't let him get away," "Murder," "Kill him," were heard.

The policeman exhausted a three-weeks' wind supply in a frantic endeavor to make his whistle heard all over the district, while half dressed residents of the neighborhood quickly gathered at Penn and Frankstown avenues.

"It's burglars robbing the postoffice," whispered one excited individual, and for want of a better one, this theory was accepted at once. Not a single person thought of the lodge meeting.

From all directions police came running in response to the first officer's toots for help. A call was sent to the East End station and a few minutes later, when the reserves arrived, a cordon was thrown about the building.

One of the officers borrowed a shotgun, and in company with a half-dozen other policemen, entered the building. They found nothing wrong in the postoffice and then began a systematic search of the place. Not until the top floor was reached was the cause of the trouble ascertained.

There the police were met by the outer guard of the lodge, who began an explanation, but became so excited by the appearance of the heavily armed officers that he could not make himself understood. Finally a committee from the lodge came out of the room and explained that they had only been initiating a new member and the shooting was part of the services.

Back down the long flights of stairs trooped the angry policemen. The crowd was informed of the circumstances, and as a result it is likely that a new police order forbidding Sunday lodge meetings will be issued within the next few days.

NEGRO CHASED THROUGH PARK

Armed Fugitive Captured by Oakland Police After a Thrilling Pursuit.

FENTON MAY BE A MURDERER

Hundreds of persons leaving Schenley park at the conclusion of the organ recital yesterday afternoon witnessed the thrilling pursuit and final capture at the revolver's point of William Fenton, a desperate and heavily armed negro, who will likely have to answer to a charge of murder.

The chase followed an attempt by Fenton to escape from a house in Boundary street, where the police had surprised him. Fenton was wanted for cutting three other negroes in Oakland December 26. One of the men is said to have died as a result of the wounds.

The affray occurred at the home of Robert E. Lee, colored, in Boquet street. Fenton, in company with William Fitzsimmons and Frank Alexander, was drinking at the house, when a dispute arose. Fenton went home and returned with a razor, and before he could be prevented drew it across Fitzsimmons' face, cutting him in a frightful manner. He also cut him on the side and arm. Alexander and Lee went to Fitzsimmons' assistance, and Fenton turned on them and cut the former on the hand and Lee on the back. Fenton escaped after the cutting and the three men were taken to a hospital.

Fitzsimmons, the worst cut of the three, left the hospital before his wounds had altogether healed and went to his home near Harrisburg. Word was received here a few weeks later that he had died from blood-poisoning as a result of his wounds.

No trace of Fenton could be found by the police until yesterday, when they learned he was at the home of a friend in Boundary street. They also learned that Fenton was armed and had made the boast that he would kill the first policeman who attempted to arrest him.

Inspector Boyle, Lieut. McPoland and Bicycle Policeman McGint went to the house. Fenton saw them coming and barricaded himself in a second-story room. While the officers were surrounding the house Fenton jumped from the window and ran in the direction of Schenley park. The policemen, with drawn revolvers, gave chase and captured the negro on the hillside near the Carnegie library. Fenton only gave up when the police threatened to shoot.

A 38-caliber revolver was found on Fenton, but he made no effort to use the weapon during the chase.

Cutting to Be Investigated.

Martin Flaherty of Fifty-fourth street was held over for a further investigation yesterday morning by Magistrate Kane. He was arrested Saturday night on a charge of cutting Mike Foley, also of Fifty-fourth street.

HUMP ORDINANCE NOT YET SIGNED

Mayor Fails to Approve Bond Bill, Which Is Discussed by His Cabinet.

OPPOSITION IS REPORTED

Mayor Hays has not yet signed the hump bond ordinance, and his failure to do so has caused a great deal of wonder. This bill was passed finally by councils last Monday with the filtration bond ordinances and a number of other measures which were promptly approved by the city executive. The hump ordinance was sent to the mayor on Thursday. The mayor has declared that the hump removal will cost the city at least $4,000,000 to $5,000,000, and there was a report yesterday that the mayor did not intend to sign the bill, but would allow it to become a law without his signature.

He has 10 days in which to sign the ordinance, the 10 days expiring Wednesday. A meeting of the mayor and his cabinet was held Saturday afternoon at which the proposed bond issue for filtration and the hump were discussed. At this conference Director Bigelow learned that the hump project was destined to meet with strong opposition, particularly on the South Side, in the East End, Brushton and in Lawrenceville.

Director Bigelow discovered that he would have considerable difficulty in getting the payroll to make a fight for the bond issue on July 12, particularly on the part of the employes of the public safety department. Director Moore resides on the South Side, and he reported that the feeling in his section was adverse to the hump scheme.

Both branches of councils will meet tomorrow. Today was the regular day scheduled for councils to meet, but the sessions were postponed on account of today being a legal holiday.

TERRORIZED THE SISTERS.

Michael Korch Charged With Breaking Into a Catholic Institution.

Michael Korch was committed to jail yesterday for court.

On March 12 he got into the house of the sisters attached to Father Jander's Roman Catholic church in Homestead, and, after terrorizing the sisters, broke mirrors and ornaments and carried off beads and other trinkets.

It happened that Korch was arrested the same day later before his depredations at the sisters' house became known, and at a hearing the next day was fined for disorderly conduct. John Span, an officer of the church, learned later that Korch was the man who forced his way into the sisters' house, and made information against him for entering a building with intent to commit a felony.

Korch had left Homestead in the meantime, but returned on Saturday, was arrested and Justice Jones sent him to jail.

LIQUOR EMPTIED INTO THE SEWER

Police Will Destroy Whisky and Beer in Wholesale Quantities Today.

MANY SPEAKEASIES RAIDED

Whisky and beer in wholesale quantities will flow at the Oakland police station today. About 100 gallons of whisky and 50 kegs of beer will be emptied into the sewer by the police in order to give room in the cells in the station for prisoners, the liquor having been taken from speakeasies in Oakland.

On Friday night the police got 87 gallons of whisky in the house of John Walco, Romeo street, and yesterday got 33 eighths of beer and six gallons of whisky in another house. Large quantities have also been found in other places and the stuff has taken up so much space in the station that there is not sufficient accommodation for the prisoners.

The arrest of Peter Pelso of Sharpsburg in a house in Old avenue, opposite the residence of Mayor Hays, caused the police last night to raid four houses in that vicinity about 9 o'clock. Twelve men and four women were arrested. Pelso had trouble with a woman and the police were called to put him out. It was said Pelso had drawn a revolver, and he was locked up as a suspicious character. Capt. Bartley concluded to arrest the woman who had trouble with Pelso, but he could not learn which was the right woman and he arrested all in the house.

"Performing worldly employment on the Sabbath day," is the charge preferred against Frank Melick and Michael Arginos, both of Boundary street, by the police of the Oakland station. In order to avoid the charge of keeping a disorderly house the police allege that the men sold beer in the street in front of their homes yesterday afternoon.

Inspector Boyle and a squad of police raided the alleged speakeasy of John Lally, 48 Irwin street, Hazelwood, at noon yesterday, and arrested the proprietor and four visitors. The place was barricaded and entrance was made through a window in the cellar. Thirty-three kegs of beer, four cases of beer, and six gallons of whisky were confiscated.

Inspector Boyle also raided the alleged disorderly house of John Rosen, 2320 Forbes street, where they arrested the proprietor and 11 visitors.

Policemen raided the disorderly house of Emma Allen, a negress, in Negley run, yesterday. The proprietress and five visitors were arrested.

Thomas Scheff of 2021 Webster avenue was arrested yesterday on a charge of keeping a gambling house. Five visitors were found in the place.

Boys Drowned a Horse.

Joseph Regan of Edwards alley, South Side, was in a liberal mood yesterday and presented a number of boys with a horse for which he had no further use. The boys mounted the animal and rode it to the foot of South Twenty-first street, where they concluded it would be a good idea to see if the horse could swim. They rode the animal into the water and found it could not. The horse drowned. All the boys escaped. Regan is now searching for a new horse.

MOTHER AWAITED HER BOY'S RETURN

Little John Cole Kisses Parent Goodby and Is Drowned Shortly After.

ANOTHER BODY IN THE RIVER

Giving his little brother a penny as inducement to return home yesterday afternoon, John Cole, aged 14, went swimming off a barge at the foot of Thirty-sixth street and was drowned. Not more than 10 minutes before the lad had kissed his mother goodby and promised to return in a short time. The boy was the only support of his mother and several younger brothers and sisters. Mrs. Cole was in a serious condition last night from shock after she had awaited his return anxiously for several hours. The family lives at 3525 Mulberry alley. Last night the river was being dragged in an effort to find the body.

The mystery of the disappearance of Samuel Goldsmith, aged 35 years, who had been missing from his home, 2012 Concord alley, since last Thursday, was solved yesterday, when the corpse of the man was pulled out of the Monongahela river at the foot of Penn avenue. The body was found by A. J. Grable, a watchman on the Pacific coal fleet. Goldsmith, who was a toby-roller, had been married only four months. Thursday he left home, angry, after a dispute with his young wife. It is supposed he committed suicide.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tourangean, aged 28 years, of Beaver avenue, Allegheny, died yesterday at St. John's General hospital of injuries received by falling downstairs five weeks ago.

Milfred Danger, aged 33 years, was found dead in Huckestein's brickyard in Henderson street, Allegheny, yesterday. The man had been drinking heavily.

A baby two months old, said to be named Samuel Levine, died yesterday at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, 10 Arbor street. The child was given into her care two weeks ago, it is said, by the Children's Aid society.

Councilmen of Lowellville, O., Angry Because P. R. R. Ordinance Was Vetoed.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 29.—(Special.)—The Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the city council of Lowellville will ask Gov. Herrick to remove Mayor Thomas Whitmer of Lowellville from office because he vetoed an ordinance permitting the company to have a new right of way through the village.

Mandamus proceedings have been commenced to compel the signing of the ordinance, and they will be heard on Monday. Whitmer says that the people of the village are with him, and that if he is pushed too far there will be sensational developments.

ALLEGHENY POLICE FIND LITTLE VICE IN THE CITY

The Entire Front Office Force, Looking for Speak-Easies and Gambling Houses, Arrest Only a Juvenile Horse Thief.

[illegible] out yesterday morning with [illegible] clean up every speakeasy and [illegible] house remaining in the city, [illegible] office force, special officers [illegible]men of the Allegheny police [illegible]g to show for their hard work [illegible] but a small boy accused of [illegible]ling.

[illegible] Scandrett on Saturday instructed Police Superintendent Campbell [illegible] into service every man in the [illegible]ice, regardless of his regular [illegible] duty. The order was to scour [illegible] from one end to the other and [illegible] a blow to law-breakers that would [illegible]ally end certain violations of the [illegible]es. But the activity of the police [illegible] past three weeks has been such [illegible] according to appearances yesterday. [illegible] is not a resort in the city selling [illegible]or without license, except the disorderly houses in the First and Fourth [illegible]rds. Director Scandrett seemed more [illegible]appointed than pleased when he [illegible]arned last night that no arrest had been made and that not a speakeasy or illegal club had been discovered.

"Surely the lid is nailed down hard and fast," he said, when informed of the result of the day's labor.

While working through the upper end of the city Detectives Ehrhardt, Einstein and Aiken were informed that George Engle had stolen a horse and trap from John Utz, a farmer of Wexford. Engle, who is 15 years old and lives on Troy Hill, had been working for Utz. The latter came to the city on Saturday morning and returning found that Engle had disappeared and that a valuable horse and buggy had evidently gone with him. Engle was arrested at his home and the horse and buggy were found in a stable in Second street.

France is congratulating itself upon the wisdom that led it early into the field of submarine torpedo boat construction. It now has a large fleet of that type of naval vessels and the French experts are figuring that they could easily destroy the great English navy. The Gazette has been a friend of the submarine boat as an engine of offense and defense, but it cannot subscribe to the optimistic French estimate. The submarine boat is not invincible. In war practice it is little less secure from collision with contact mines or the discharge of torpedoes than the great battleships or cruisers. And it should be borne in mind that submarines will not be welcomed by the enemy to perform their deadly work without let or hindrance.

It is apparent the Japanese success in occupying Kinchau and Nanshan heights has proven a staggering blow to Russia. According to European military standards those positions were impregnable to assault. Japan, however, has taken a lesson from the United States, where it is held any position may be carried by assault if the attacking force be large enough and willing to make the sacrifice. Russia will be further discouraged by learning from Japanese official reports that their losses in killed and wounded are not more than one-third the number estimated on Friday—that is hardly a thousand more than the Russian losses in the repulse of the Yalu river. The Russian reports of 12,000 have been reduced by the Japanese to 8,500, which leaves much larger force for the advance upon Port Arthur.

For the first time in its history the British Industrial Chemical society will hold its annual meeting away from home. New York has been selected for the function. Afterward the chemists will visit Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and the exposition at St. Louis. They will certainly find much of interest and profit on the tour. Besides the chemists various organizations of mechanical, electrical, mining and civil engineers of Great Britain and Europe are arranging to visit this country this year. Their principal objectives are Pittsburgh and the St. Louis exposition. They have felt the competitive force of the American practice and they want to see just what it is and how it is managed. They are welcome. When they catch up, we will be able to forge ahead again, with renewed interest in the race.

At Liverpool the opinion prevails that the trans-Atlantic rate war will not continue long. This belief is based upon the assumption that the Cunard line will not meet the cut and the reasoning that the continental lines will not enjoy losing $10 on each passenger. The reasoning looks good. But it is a fair question to ask how much the great Cunarders will lose per passenger operating with nine-tenths of their berths and cabins unoccupied. Undoubtedly the freight movement from Europe to the United States will be lighter this year and the emigrant movement should show a marked decline. Fewer Americans will visit Europe on business and pleasure. More Europeans will come here on account of the world's fair, but on the whole there will be less traffic, and under such circumstances the lowest rate boats will do the largest business.

In the talk of compromise among the warring factions of the Democracy the name of George B. McClellan, mayor of New York, is now heard most frequently. It is certain that Bryan will not accept any man with the Cleveland stamp upon him, and it is equally certain that the sentiment of the Democracy at large favors the nomination of a New York man. Thus the leaders hope to win that state from the Republicans. Judge Parker, while leading in the number of pledged delegates, is still a doubtful quantity. On the other hand, Mayor McClellan has been outspoken, and he has also proved his executive ability by giving New York a good municipal administration. These things are being pointed out in his favor, and he may be the dark horse to win the nomination. There is also talk of an understanding between Senator Gorman and Col. Guffey to throw the nomination to McClellan if possible. While we believe Col. Guffey's name is being used without warrant in this connection, it is probable he may have much to do with the final decision.

Premier Combes' promise that the question of separation of church and state will be taken up in January, together with the tone of the debate on the matter of the recall of the French ambassador to the Vatican, calls attention to the law that has been prepared by the committee. This act probably interprets the government attitude. It is very drastic. It provides for complete separation of church and state, declares the government will no longer pay any moneys for the support of any denomination, or furnish any building for any religious use whatever. It also abolishes the concordat. The extremity of this measure will almost certainly cause serious agitation in France during the remainder of this year and provoke a hot battle in the chamber of deputies in January. But it is a sign of the growing independence and stability of the republic.

Many Tributes to Quay.

Such tributes are paid to the worth of Senator M. S. Quay by eminent men throughout the country as show that he was appreciated wherever known. From President Roosevelt, who knew him thoroughly, there is token of high regard; from cabinet officers, from senators, from representatives, from governors of states, from party leaders, from men of affairs, from all these there are expressions of sorrow, of sympathy for the bereaved relatives and involuntary testimony to the greatness of the man. In all this vast country there have been only two or three discordant notes from sources incapable of appreciating superior mentality, tireless energy and unlimited fidelity.

Within the few hours since death laid his hand upon Senator Quay, there has welled up a chorus of praise for his many admirable qualities that would have greatly embarrassed him in life. He had grown almost indifferent to criticism and cared little for the vicious attacks made upon him. But his friends knew better than to heap praise upon him for his virtues. They might deny the vindictive slanders circulated about him, if they chose to take the trouble, but the man so much maligned hated eulogy. In this sad moment, however, his host of admirers come forward in perfect taste to lay upon his bier their tribute of respect.

It is often difficult for even wise men to see clearly through the rancor of partisan prejudice. To most men, however, death strikes down malice and dispels the mist that clouds the vision. Thus it is that political enemies at this time join with political friends in testifying their appreciation of Senator Quay's real worth as scholar, statesman and patriot.

The Red Cross Troubles.

The disclosures made in regard to the management of the American Red Cross have fully shown the need of complete reorganization. Miss Clara Barton's resignation renders further comment upon her management unnecessary, but in order that the society may regain the public confidence it must be placed upon a business basis and its management subjected to close responsibility in the administration of its funds. The remonstrants whose efforts, persisted in against determined opposition, compelled the investigation now going on, demand that the society shall be reorganized under a new charter to be obtained from congress, and that meanwhile its affairs shall be managed by a board of trustees, four to be appointed by the president of the United States, four by the remonstrants, and four by the present trustees. A special meeting of the society has been called to meet June 16, at which reorganization plans will be discussed.

The proposal of the remonstrants seems to be an equitable one and its acceptance would undoubtedly restore public confidence. President Roosevelt has taken a deep interest in the affairs of the society and would undoubtedly appoint trustees of high character, whose presence on the board would be a guarantee of the capability and integrity of the management. The difficulties in which the society are now involved are the results of irresponsible control, and this source of mischief would be at once eliminated by the proposed reorganization. The present trustees, however, still appear to occupy an attitude of resistance to a reorganization, as it is stated that the committee named to nominate officers to be voted for at the coming meeting have been notified by members of the board that their names need not be considered if it be thought that a complete new organization is advisable. Nothing less than this will now be satisfactory, even if it causes a complete change in the trustees.

Those who have followed the course of the investigation know that while there have been irregularities and improprieties, the fact still stands that the society has done and is doing a great work. It should be kept up, but it should be under public control, and matters have reached such a point that the only choice left to the present trustees is to accede to complete reorganization or be retired. If a satisfactory adjustment is not reached by the time congress meets again there will probably be a congressional investigation, leading up to the formation of an entirely new organization, acting under a national charter and with direct representation of the national government in its management.

The Gorman Program.

The Maryland Democratic platform is attracting much attention because it is recognized as an embodiment of Senator Gorman's views of party policy and also because it attempts to strike a note of conservative reaction against the radicalism imputed to President Roosevelt. This is the plan of campaign of the reorganizers. Their scheme is to unload upon the Republican administration the reproach of headlong radicalism, which has been the mark of Bryanism. Having found in two campaigns that a program of financial and industrial revolution does not win at the polls, it has occurred to the old leaders as a happy idea to try the reverse policy and present the Democratic party as an agency of conservatism and economy in national affairs. There is no mention of the financial issue, and the Panama canal treaty is referred to as a closed incident, although the means employed are condemned. The stress of platform utterance is laid upon economical reform. A call is made for "great and far-reaching retrenchment in every branch of the public service." Tariff revision is demanded, but this is to be carried out "in a conservative spirit of fairness to all interests." There will be "due regard for the capital and labor involved in our industrial interests as to promote their healthy growth and to carefully guard against the infliction of injury upon established industries by abrupt, unjust and radical measures," but at the same time "odious and powerful monopolies may expect reduction of the excessive rates under which they have been enabled to extort oppressive tribute from the people."

This being translated from the swollen diction of political buncombe into plain language, means that Senator Gorman stands for a protective tariff, with a slashing of duties on products made by the so-called trusts. It does not take much consideration to show that "trust busting" by tariff slashing is nothing but claptrap. Its insensate character has never been better exposed than by President Roosevelt in his speech at Cincinnati in the fall of 1902. He pointed out that the trusts can be damaged through tariff reductions only on condition of damaging all their competitors and all the wage workers employed in the industry. The trust or big corporation might suffer relatively to, and in the interest of its foreign competitor, but its relative position towards its American competitors would probably be improved. President Roosevelt went on to show that the question of trust regulation is separate and distinct from the question of tariff revision. The first condition of wise action is that the government should have the means of obtaining full knowledge of the methods of the trusts. Then "what further steps of any kind are necessary can be taken with the confidence born of possession of power to deal with the subject, and of a thorough knowledge of what should and can be done in the matter."

These prudent counsels are far from sustaining the charge of recklessness imputed by the Maryland platform. A proper start towards a solution of the trust problem has been made by the organization of the department of commerce and labor. Legislation should be directed towards regulation rather than destruction. A program of "trust busting" by tariff smashing means panic, ruin and distress.

Principle at Stake.

Naturally the government at Washington has declined to agree to the terms proposed by Bandit Rasouly. It is not the function of this government to ask the sultan of Morocco to abandon sovereignty over a part of his territory in favor of a kidnaping scoundrel, though it is within its rights in demanding that the sultan shall give adequate protection to American citizens within his jurisdiction. The United States may do anything to secure the safe delivery of Ion Perdicaris except to sacrifice principle. To accede to Rasouly's impudent proposition would be to make such a sacrifice and, in addition, to entangle the country in North African politics.

If it comes to the worst pass Rasouly may murder Perdicaris and defy the sultan of Morocco. In that event the United States and Great Britain will be compelled to demand and exact adequate indemnity from Morocco. They may also land a sufficient force to hunt Rasouly and his bandits to their lair and put an end to their depredations. It is a good many years since the United States sent a naval force into the Mediterranean to discourage piracy and announced that it had millions for defense but not one cent for tribute, but the nation has altered none in principle. It is ready to declaim the same attitude in the present case and to "make good."

The lives of Perdicaris and his stepson will be saved if that be possible by fair means, but not on any such terms as Rasouly suggests. Perdicaris may have to be sacrificed to national principle, as many good American citizens have been. But if he is sacrificed Rasouly and Morocco will be taught a lesson that will do them good, though Rasouly is not likely to survive long to profit by it.

Marse Henry still leaves Cleveland out of his calculations. He says Olney, Parker, Gray, Gorman, McClellan and Cockrell "are all good Democrats, and any one of them will please the Courier Journal." And all of them are without the Bryan O. K., by the way.

By reading the eastern papers we discover that Col. Guffey is to support Parker, also McClellan, also Gorman. It is kind of Col. Guffey to be thus impartial, but why not include Cleveland and Hearst?

The Panama legislature has rejected the gold basis for her monetary standard. But it didn't reject Uncle Sam's gold in payment for the canal strip. This is inconsistent. We could have better spared the silver.

If Uncle Sam sends a few of his marines into Morocco, Rasouly will discover that the bandit business is not what it is cracked up to be.

The Turks are sure to get active as soon as the eyes of the world are cast in another direction. The massacre of the people of 43 Armenian villages is their latest deviltry.

The clanking of "father's sword" is heard in the east, and perhaps young George B. McClellan can wield it effectively enough to get the Democratic nomination for the presidency.

The favorite Japanese drink these days seems to be a little port, the Arthur brand preferred.

Hearst has cancelled his order for big hotel accommodations in St. Louis. Evidently he has seen a "great white light."

The Russians are convinced at last that Port Arthur must fall. Then if they agree with the Japanese, why fight about it?

Peru and Brazil have settled their Acre dispute. That's better than a line-fence lawsuit. They always hold out for generations.

If Russia continues to lose big guns a bit longer, she will certainly want the rules of war changed to limit the weapons to popguns.

Talked of in Gotham

By GEORGE C. JENKS.

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, May 29.—An impressive pause fell over the city of New York today. It was the stillness which is always the precursor of a holiday jollification, when it seems as if everyone is gathering up strength for a rip-roaring old time on the morrow. It is true that Memorial day is to some extent a sacrament. But that does not prevent the time being spent largely in seeking recuperation from a long spell of work and in enjoying to the full such pleasures as are offered always to the people of this city whenever a break comes in the dull routine of daily labor. Some of the population went out of town yesterday, and will not return until Tuesday morning. Those are the fortunate individuals who have friends living in suburban villages and towns, or who can afford to pay summer hotel charges for three or four days. There are thousands of such in this community. But there are a million or so who are obliged to husband their resources, and who have been saving up for weeks for the expenditures of Decoration day. It is this million which was resting in the city today. They will break forth early in the morning, and while many of them will visit the cemeteries, a great many more will go straight to Coney Island, Rockaway, and other "beaches," or will take the trolley into the Jersey hills, or steamer for the upper reaches of the Hudson. Indications are that the weather will be favorable, and there is a general feeling of pleasant expectation pervading tenements and modest "apartments" from the Bronx to the Battery, and Hell's Kitchen to Bensonhurst. A holiday from Saturday to Tuesday is good reason for demure satisfaction.

Another Big American-Built Ship.

New steamers are generally introduced at this time of year, and New York expects, as a prescriptive right, that it shall see a certain number of handsome home-made craft for the first time in its waters in the months of May and June. A few days ago the big Albany boat, C. W. Morse, excited wonder and admiration, when she made her first appearance in the harbor in midstream. Now we have the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's new twin-screw steamship, Manchuria, one of the largest twin-screw vessels ever built in this country. She was brought into existence at the yards of the New York Shipbuilding Company, in Camden, N. J., and is expected to arrive at this port tonight. She will ply between San Francisco and the principal ports in China, Japan and the Philippines.

More Lights on Broadway.

After many months of darkness, the west side of Long Acre square is brilliantly illuminated every night now. The new Astor hotel, an enormous structure, which takes up a great deal of that side of the square, is lighted from top to bottom with electricity as soon as darkness falls each evening, thus making a continuation of the "Great White Way" further north than ever before in its history. The electric lights of Broadway are famous. Heretofore they have ceased at Forty-second street, except for the lights of the New York and Criterion theaters and one or two restaurants on the east side of the thoroughfare. The west side has always been dark. Now it is as brilliant as any part of Broadway. The hotel is not open for business, but the hotel's electric plant is on trial, and every room in the building will be lighted up nightly until opening day.

Hotel Men His First Guests.

The first meal to be served in the new Hotel Astor will be a banquet for the delegates of the Hotel Men's association, on the 9th of June. Mr. Muschenheim, manager of the house, will be the host of his brother hotel managers, and he will give them the satisfaction of knowing that the first important meal in the largest hotel in New York will be served for their delectation. The convention in this city will last several days, and, as the jovial nature of men of their profession is proverbial, there will be many provisions for their pleasure. An automobile trip to Coney Island will be one feature, and a ride also in automobiles through Central park and along Riverside drive and the Speedway another. Pittsburgh will be represented by several well-known hotel managers.

Why Don't They?

As a slight relief to the monotony of the "end seat hog" controversy, one citizen, signing himself "Smoker," breaks out violently in a paper here with this: "Why the devil don't the women keep out of the three last seats in the summer cars?" Seems to me I have heard something like that in Pittsburgh.

Tongue-Tangler for Yonkers.

Yonkers, through its board of aldermen, has named one of its thoroughfares Schmeckenbecher avenue. Some of the citizens do not like it, and ask why they should be saddled with such a jawcracker just because Schmeckenbecher happens to be the family name of one of the aldermen. The name is likely to stick, however, and already the police are making the pronunciation of the word a test of sobriety for prisoners brought in under suspicion of drunkenness.

Any Way to Get There.

Stampedes at the Brooklyn bridge in the rush hours are responsible for offences which never were heard of until it became the regular thing to fight for foothold in the cars, to say nothing of obtaining seats. Three young men were arraigned yesterday, charged with wriggling through open windows of the cars to get ahead of the crowd that forced its way through the doorway. Crawling through windows has become a recognized method of entry among young men and boys, but the police think it too dangerous to be allowed, and they will arrest those who do it—when they can catch them. That there is a special providence watching over passengers on the bridge and Brooklyn trolley cars no one can doubt. Were it otherwise, the passenger traffic of the companies would diminish so fast that the rush problem would solve itself long before the proposed subway service is in use.

Leave 'Em to the Girls.

Shirtwaists are tabooed in the boys' high school of Orange, N. J. The superintendent, Dr. Swingle, does not like them, and when he found several boys with their coats off in the big assembly room on one of the sweltering days of last week he was so annoyed that he at once prepared an edict forbidding the removal of coats in the class rooms or anywhere else in the building where studies were in progress. Some of the young men thought they would cut something of a dash with their fancy shirtwaists and champagne-colored shoes, and they are much disgusted. But the superintendent's order "goes," all the same.

The Quiet Observer

By ERASMUS WILSON.

Hark! I hear the tramp of thousands,
And of armed men the hum;
Lo! a nation's hosts have gathered
Round the quick alarming drum—
Saying, "Come,
Freemen, come!
Ere your heritage be wasted," said the quick alarming drum.

"Let me of my heart take counsel:
War is not of life the sum;
Who shall stay and reap the harvest
When the autumn days shall come?"
But the drum
Echoed, "Come!
Death shall reap the braver harvest," said the solemn-sounding drum.

"But when won the coming battle,
What of profit springs therefrom?
What if conquest, subjugation,
Even greater ills become?"
But the drum
Answered, "Come!
You must do the sum and prove it," said the Yankee answering drum.

What if, 'mid the cannon's thunder,
Whistling shot and bursting bomb,
When my brothers fall around me,
Should my heart grow cold and numb?
But the drum
Answered, "Come!
Better there in death united than in life a recreant—come!"

Thus they answered—hoping, fearing,
Some in faith, and doubting some,
Till a trumpet-voice proclaiming,
Said, "My chosen people, come!"
Then the drum,
Lo, was dumb:
For the great heart of the nation, throbbing, answered, "Lord, we come!"

—Bret Harte.

Does not that bring up memories of the days back in the early '60s?

Those were days to remember.

They were history-making days, and great was the history they made, for then was begun a new volume of world history.

In the beginning of those days the United States was quite a small and insignificant affair in the eyes of the world. We were not noted as a world power at all, but were tolerated and respected in a commercial way.

But when it came to great doings, to changing the map of the world and to apportioning world power we were not in it, so to speak.

It is different now.

The flags of all nations dip respectfully as Old Glory goes by, and not merely through courtesy.

And when your Uncle Sam says, "Thumbs up," thumbs go up everywhere; not that he is a bossy, pettish sort of fellow, but because the world knows that he pretty nearly knows when he is right, and that he has the money and the ships and the men to enforce the right as he sees it.

Ancient history is filled with wonderful stories about the rise of nations, but none of these compare with our story. Instead of securing our territory through conquest, we settled upon the virgin lands and builded steadily, and builded well, fighting only for justice and human rights.

* * * *

This being Memorial day, it is meet and proper that we not only remember those who died that the republic might live, but remember the republic, the living present, and the coming future.

Do we forget?

Unfortunately, some are very prone to do so, and to forget the things they should remember. They may not want to forget those who nobly offered their lives as willing sacrifices on the altar of our country, but they do forget, sometimes, to be grateful.

Following is a striking instance of forgetfulness; and there are others.

When the American cruiser "Maine" was blown up by a torpedo in Havana harbor in February, 1898, one of the heroes of the occasion was a marine doing guard duty on deck. After the shock of the explosion he approached the door of the cabin, knocked, and when Capt. Sigsbee appeared, saluted and said:

"I have to report, sir, that your ship has been blown up and is sinking!"

This man was Sergt. William Anthony, and his praise was sung throughout the land.

After the war and at the expiration of the term of his enlistment, Anthony left the navy and tried to make a living as a civilian. He married and hoped to gather about him the comforts of a home. Anthony was a man of reserve and lacked the ability to advance himself in the world. His small savings were soon exhausted. Nobody would employ him.

One day he shot himself, leaving a pathetic note to his young wife, who had returned to her family to await better fortune.

"Bill" Anthony's death produced a profound shock throughout the country. Hundreds of employers of labor sent letters to the newspapers expressing regret and sorrow. Nevertheless poor Anthony's body lay unclaimed at the hospital, and a brief press dispatch reached the office of the Philadelphia Times at 1 o'clock in the morning, announcing that the hero's body would be sent to the morgue.

The editor into whose hands this dispatch came, instantly decided to save Anthony's body from the dissecting room, the morgue and the potter's field. Dispatches were sent to the superintendent of the hospital, imploring him to hold the body; to the superintendent of charities, asking that he refuse the corpse admission to the morgue, to undertaker Merritt, asking him to secure the body and prepare it for burial at the Times' expense; to Richard Croker, invoking his aid; to Mayor Van Wyck, and other influential members of the New York city government, asking such assistance as they could render—not of a financial character. By 9 o'clock of the same morning on which poor Anthony's corpse would have been in a pine box for removal to potter's field, his clay was in the hands of friends. All that was mortal of Sergt. Anthony rests in the grave at Evergreen cemetery, bought and paid for by an American newspaper that was not ungrateful.

So far as known, not one of the self-proclaimed philanthropists who "would have aided" the hero of the Maine stood beside his bier or placed a flower thereon. But the common people rallied in thousands, many of them bringing a single rose or a white carnation to add to the floral tribute sent by the editor who had rescued a nation's hero from a pauper's grave.

It happened so long ago they say—
Five times as long as all my years—
That grandpa marched to the war away,
And grandma cried such bitter tears.

And there was a battle—and grandpa fell;
And mamma cried as the orphan cries;
And there were no flowers and no church bells;
And nobody knows where my grandpa lies.

So I've brought all my roses here today,
To send to the graveyard—take them, please,
And if you should see a lonely grave
Without any flowers, will you scatter these?

And maybe some child in the southern land
May drop a flower in a lonely spot,
And somehow grandpa will understand
That his grave today was not forgot.

—Sue Gregory, in Primary Education.

Comrades do not meet together to mourn and lament their dead, but rather to recall their names, their faces and their achievements. And instead of tearfully bewailing their taking off they rejoice that they had for messmates men so patriotic, brave and unselfish as to venture to do or die for the old flag.

Memorial day is not a tearful day for veterans, but a proud day—a day on which to show forth the respect they have for their comrades, and to hold their lives and their work up before the world as something worthy of men, and to thank God that such noble men lived and that it was their privilege to associate with them in camp and on the battlefield.

Those who, in the hour of danger promise never, no never, to forget, may have forgotten, or may yet forget, but the true soldier never will forget his comrades, and while one remains on earth there will be a Decoration day.

Better Than the Press Agent.

A St. Louis preacher declares that "St. Louis in the fullness of her glory is a city whose immorality is only paralleled by the debaucheries of Babylon and Rome before their fall." The World's fair press agents are ribbing the good parson up to hand out some more hot shot of the same lurid brand.—Atlanta Constitution.

The City Farmer

THE STROLLER.

Our genial friend Robert is the owner of a farm in Westmoreland county. Robert lives in the city, except sometimes one day in the week, when he goes up to the nearest village by train, hires a livery rig and drives out to view his possessions. He makes a gala day of it, and really gets his money's worth—unless he tries to figure out the detail of what the market basketful of things he is bringing back with him costs.

A couple of weeks ago, Robert spent Saturday and Sunday on the farm. Sunday evening he returned the horse to the livery stable and paid $3 for its use. Then he carefully lifted a basket of eggs out of the buggy.

"What did those eggs cost you?" inquired the liveryman.

Robert began scratching his head. "Derned if I know," he said. "Give me a piece of paper and a pencil and I'll figure it out."

And this is the way it looked to him: Livery hire, $3; railroad fare, $2; drinks for tenant, hired man and their friends who happened to be in at the time, $2; incidentals, $2. Total, $9.

"Oh, that's not so bad," said Robert, after he had figured the expense. "If a couple of dozen fresh eggs are not worth $9 to a city man he has no soul for eggs."

And Robert, with is precious burden, started for the city, his only fear being that he might break an egg and thus lose 37½ cents.

Milk and Champagne.

The experience of Robert recalls that of another Pittsburgher, a very wealthy man, who had a fine farm a few miles from the city. One day he inveigled a friend into accompanying him out to see the wheat and oats grow. The two friends had a great time knocking about in the woods and the fields, and when they returned to the farm house they were pretty well warmed up. The spring house looked inviting, and the two gentlemen naturally walked in that direction.

"Oh, for a merry milk-maid to hand one a glass of fresh, pure, cold milk!" sighed the guest.

"I'll play milk-maid and furnish the milk, if you prefer that," replied the host, "or I have plenty of wine here, iced and ready for business. On the whole, I'd rather you would take the wine; it's cheaper."

But the guest stuck to his preference for milk. He wanted to know how it would taste with a knowledge that it cost more than $4 a quart.

Sight That Thrills.

Did you ever watch one of the big Ohio river packet boats come majestically upstream, laden with freight and passengers? On a clear summer's day it is an inspiring pleasure to stand on the bluffs below the Bellevue dam and watch one of these vessels slowly approach from out the far-away distance down stream.

At a place about opposite to where the town of Coraopolis nestles among the hills, the river makes an abrupt turn to the left. As you sit in a cool spot on the bluff, with your eyes lazily resting on that curve where the ribbon of water is lost, you suddenly feel an electric thrill! Silently the white nose of the big packet swings around the bend and then the whole boat stands in silhouette against the sky line. Somehow it seems the very embodiment of American progress and industry, so that you feel almost like taking off your hat and giving three cheers.

Continuing to gaze, the outline of the boat gradually grows stronger and more clear. The gang-planks in front, the decks above and the cabin windows on the sides all seem to be a photograph held before the face. Perhaps your eye is attracted by a flash of color, and when you look again, there is the glorious flag flaunting its stars and stripes before the smiling gaze of the summer sun.

Soon the breeze carries to you the bellowing of calves, the bleating of sheep and the crowing of roosters. On the upper decks men and women sit or walk, and should they see you, sitting there on the hillside, they will wave their hands, and dull, indeed, is your spirit if you do not respond. All at once a white breath puffs into the air, to be followed by a deep voice calling to the locks. Four times the hoarse whistle calls and soon the locks begin to pull back.

To the whole situation there is a living key. He is the master man who stands in a little house on the top deck, with a great wheel spinning, now right, now left, before him. A pilot holds lives in each grip of the hand, in each twist of the arm. And when he rings his mellow-toned bell there is a man in the engine room who instantly does something to the machinery so the great paddle wheel may revolve or stop. Did you ever read John Hay's "Jim Bludso?"

"Through the hot, black breath of the burnin' boat
Jim Bludso's voice was heard,
And they all had trust in his cussedness,
And knowed he would keep his word.
And, sure's you're born, they all got off
Afore the smokestacks fell,
And Bludso's ghost went up alone
In the smoke of the Prairie Belle."

Takes Money to Run It.

The attendance for the week at the World's fair is expected to exceed largely that of the last, which was 257,611. This was nearly 25,000 in excess of the number at Chicago for the corresponding week. But, taking into consideration the greater size and cost of the fair at St. Louis, to insure success there will have to be a much larger proportional attendance than this. The present is the fourth week of the fair, and indications are that the tide is fairly beginning to set in that direction.—Louisville Courier Journal.

Tabby Is in Great Demand.

Mr. Frank Rockefeller is corralling cats to pit against the gophers that are becoming altogether too prevalent in his Kiowa ranch. We may expect to hear from the paragraphers that the first steps have been taken towards forming a tabby trust, and from some humorous quip some solemn ass in Kansas will probably deduce a column or so of bitter protest—upon which the only comment possible will be, "It is to laugh."—Cleveland Leader.

LOVE SONNETS OF A FARMER.

I haven't saw the sun go down an' red
One-half as pretty as your head of hair.
They ain't no girl around here anywhere
Can boast of having such a dandy head.
And that ain't all; I've saw you making bread
With hands that would have made a million-aire
Just drop his highfalutin' ways and stare,
Or try to get you for his girl, instead.

I never see a posie in the grass
But what I think of you and how you smile,
And then I want to run about a mile,
Or dance a jig, or hear somebody sass
And lick him, just to show he ain't my class,
I feel so good; then every little while
I get so scairt for fear I ain't your style
I feel as brittle as a piece of glass.

Jim Elcher's sister met me yesterday
And said, "I know your trouble, you're in love!"
And I said, "What in time you talkin' of?"
But you can bet I knew! I want to say
If any feller tries to guy at me
He'll find it ain't what it's cracked up to be.

Last night when I was plowing the divide,
Near where the huckelberries used to grow,
I heard a pigeon calling soft and low,
And it made prickles run along my hide;
And then the horses jerked me from my stride,
And then I gave a pull and shouted, "Whoa!"
They stopped so quick I got an awful blow—
The dummed plowhandle jabbed me in the side.

Somehow, that bird reminded me of you,
And made me wonder if a time would come
When you would call me with a lover's coo,
And we would have a little nest with some
Of mother's roses growin' in the yard
And everything as slick as melted lard.

NOT ALWAYS WAS QUAY A WINNER

James Francis Burke, Who Studied Him, Recounts the Late Senator's Setbacks.

BUT HE FINALLY TRIUMPHED

As assistant secretary and sometimes acting secretary of the Republican national committee, James Francis Burke, the attorney and Republican candidate for congress from the Pittsburgh district, got to know the late Senator Quay very well. Burke was elected assistant secretary in 1892 and served until 1896, when Senator Hanna took charge. Mr. Burke was present at the last Republican convention at which there was a real contest for the nomination for the presidency in Minneapolis in 1892. Before that time Mr. Burke had been on duty at the Republican national headquarters in New York, so that he became very well acquainted with Senator Quay. In speaking of Senator Quay yesterday Mr. Burke said:

"There are two radically false impressions extant regarding Senator Quay, first that he was always a winner, and, second, that he was a relentless foe. Both impressions do him an injustice. He went through the crucible of political adversity many times, but always emerged from it fearless and more formidable than he had ever been before.

"Politics is the greatest game of chance played by the master minds today, and because of its constant uncertainty, which requires eternal vigilance and permits one to discount the wisdom and weaknesses of others in advance, Senator Quay excelled. He boldly led where others feared to tread, and never failed to inspire confidence even in the presence of the impossible.

Quay's Hard Luck Stories.

"Although usually reticent, once he became reminiscent he was, without doubt, one of the most entertaining conversationalists in America. His so-called 'hard luck' stories always afforded special delight to himself and his hearers, beginning with his trip through the southwest, when he and a young college chum ran away and entered the magic lantern lecture business; sometimes in a tent, sometimes in a town hall. One handled the magic lantern, while the other 'lectured' on the scenes flashed on the canvas. 'One evening when we had about paid for our plant,' he used to say with a laugh, 'the lamp exploded, the audience fled, the place burned down, and not being any too enthusiastic over what might happen to us in the morning, we left town that night and traveled as far as our money lasted.' So you see his first venture in business resulted disastrously.

"In the state convention of 1891, his adversaries in the Blaine-Harrison controversy defeated him as a result of a piece of midnight strategy. In the famous Delamater fight his political future was again perilously endangered. In the last bitter struggle between the Blaine and Harrison forces at Minneapolis, Quay all but accomplished the defeat of the Harrison people and at 2 p. m. of the day of the convention at which Harrison was nominated in 1892, Quay would have been a victor and McKinley would have been the Republican standard bearer if one man had said yes instead of no. The conference was a secret one held in the rooms of the national committee and its proceedings never were and probably never will be published. But despite all the influence of Quay and the combined Blaine forces, one man declined to forgive a foe, and the conference adjourned, and the great political giants of that day went to their rooms knowing the sunrise would reveal Harrison a victor and Quay and the other Blaine leaders among the vanquished.

Gracefully Yielded to Inevitable.

"I remember well a remark of Senator Quay to a Harrison delegate after the nomination.

"'Well, Harrison was your candidate yesterday, but he's ours today. We must all take our coats off for his election.'

"A characteristic consideration for his friends was revealed on the morning of that nomination. Quay knew after the early conference that Harrison would be named. He called in his friends and informed them of his belief and advised them to vote as they deemed best and forget any obligation they owed him.

"The Harrison people proceeded to inaugurate anything but a conciliatory policy in the national committee, and the old Blaine leaders, including Quay, were set aside. The folly of this became so apparent that in the last week of the campaign, in the fall of 1892, Quay was prevailed upon to visit national headquarters and give out an interview by way of inspiring the party forces throughout the nation. But they had delayed too long sending for the political physician, and his encouraging diagnosis failed to rally the party and Cleveland became president.

"At St. Louis, in 1896, Senator Quay's friends hoped to make him the nominee, but McKinley was too strong, and again the senator's colors were lowered. In 1897 he was not successful, and his memorable struggle for his seat in the United States senate had its 'Black Friday' when Mark Hanna voted against the greatest political general in the Republican party.

"So you see, the senator had his reverses, but like old gold, 'the longer you rubbed the brighter he shone,' and out of all his countless contests he emerged the recognized gents, without a peer in the history of practical American politics.

"In all his struggles, like other men, he made enemies and yet his forgiving temperament was more strikingly illustrated in his great Philadelphia speech, which he opened with the declaration: 'My political race is run. I have no enemies to punish.' From that hour until his death he seemed to move in an atmosphere of conciliation.

Quay's Advice to Maj. Brown.

"I remember when I visited him with Maj. Brown at Philadelphia. The major was still undetermined whether to accept or reject the governor's appointment to the recordership. 'Major,' said Quay, 'if you can see your way clear to do justice to yourself and treat all factions with fairness, accept the offer; if I were in doubt about it I'd reject it. What the people of Pittsburgh want is good government not factional quarrels.' No one regretted more than he the continual difference of opinion among local Republicans, and on several occasions he made strenuous efforts to bring about harmony. The last conference he ever attended which leaders of both factions were represented was held at my home, and both sides had practically agreed to ways of peace, he shook hands with all on the way to the station he said 'Well, I am very glad this local ended. If both sides had taken vice they would have buried the a year ago. There are too many men on both sides to remain sep-

LESSONS FROM QUAY'S CAREER POINTED OUT

The illustrious career and sterling qualities of the late Senator Quay were held up as worthy examples by the Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young in the Second Presbyterian church yesterday morning, of which the mother of the late senator was a former member. Pastor Young said:

"Senator Quay's career emphasizes three facts to which each young man may well take heed:

"First—The average mortal who concentrates himself upon a single task succeeds. The senator's whole life was politics. If he had other interests they occupied subordinate places in his thinking. Politics for politics' sake was his passion. Hardly could his enemies charge him with making politics a means to acquire wealth for himself. Did he even seem to follow this pursuit for fame? Was not his controlling motive rather the simple joy of working politics scientifically, of seeing multitudes do the thing his mind had willed? By assiduous devotion to his art he became the foremost politician of America. Try putting your total soul into something, and the nobler the better; keep it up, then your life will tell mightily.

"Second—His achievements show the value of preserving one's private life free from blame. Whatever we thought of his statecraft, we were never able to point out any moral obliquity in his home relations, or to accuse him of convivial habits, or to designate a single dollar in his personal bank account as ill-gotten. Marvels are possible when you conform your individual behavior to the recognized moral code and add thereto such kindliness, energy and pluck as Senator Quay did.

"Third—His rise and prolonged sway prove the power of combining men for the same end. What genius for organization he possessed! Strangely enough all classes forgot their differences on a host of matters to follow his suggestion in the affair at hand. Understanding human nature, he ruled men. To flock by yourself in a worthy cause is nothing like so commendable as to flock with all such as are minded the same toward that cause. Suppose all churches holding a few essential doctrines in common should band together for the sole purpose of winning Pennsylvania to Christ as Senator Quay banded our citizens for political purposes, how long would any nook of the state remain unevangelized? My regret is that when his mother was a member of this very Second Presbyterian church, half a century ago, and Quay was just ripening into manhood, somebody did not persuade him, God helping, to lay his talents and enterprise at the Master's feet—for undivided service unto Him. Take care lest we neglect the future Quays, who are unknown young men this morning and moldable as clay in potter's hands."

States senate which protected the great industries of Pennsylvania, particularly the iron and steel interests, against the assaults of the free trade Democracy, placed the manufacturers and the workingmen of his native state under everlasting obligations to him. Much of the legislation at Harrisburg for the development and the support of our magnificent public school system and the great charities of the state was inspired by him and enacted largely through his influence.

"He had a marvelous faculty of harmonizing the Republican organization in what might be regarded as critical stages in its history, and the continued success of the party in this state has been mainly due to his efforts in that direction. Pennsylvanians will ever honor him as a scholar, a soldier, a party leader, and a statesman, and the more his record is studied the greater will be the laurels that will be awarded to him by his fellow countrymen."

Philadelphia will be well represented at the funeral of Senator Quay in Beaver Tuesday. Several private cars have been chartered to convey the Philadelphians who will go to Pittsburgh at 11:05 o'clock tomorrow night. A special train will leave Pittsburgh at 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, which is scheduled to arrive in Beaver in time for the funeral.

David H. Lane has been named as chairman of a committee representing the Republican executive committee of Philadelphia, which will attend the Quay funeral. In the delegation there will be in addition to Mr. Lane, James P. McNichol, State Senators George A. Vare, John C. Grady and Jesse S. Shepard; Speaker Henry F. Walton, former State Senator Charles L. Brown and Congressman Henry H. Bingham and George Castor. The Penrose Republican club will have a car of its own.

CHESTER D. POTTER.

MONK ADMIRED QUAY.

Paid Tribute as He Guided State Senator Woods Through Catacombs.

GREENSBURG, PA., May 29.—(Special.)—Senator Cyrus E. Woods said of Senator Quay tonight:

"Senator Quay was undoubtedly the greatest political general of his time, and he seemed to be recognized as such the world over. A year or two ago a Trappist monk was guiding me through the catacombs of St. Calixtus. As soon as he learned that I was an American citizen, he immediately inquired about Senator Quay. He was thoroughly familiar with the senator's history, and he ended our discussion on him with the epigrammatic statement: 'He is a born leader of men; he is a leader of leaders.' I believe the opinion of my Trappist friend is prophetic of the manner in which Senator Quay will be known to history."

Shroaden Church Dedication.

The dedication of the new Methodist Episcopal church in Chartiers avenue, Sheraden, will be on Sunday, June 19. The consecration exercises in the morning will be in charge of Bishop T. B. Neely. REMINISCENCES OF MR. QUAY ator in the hope of securing a pardon. Again was the warm spot in the colonel's heart touched.

Soldiers Marched Him Off.

"Where is the boy?" was his first inquiry. He was told that the deserter was in the outer room. For a moment he thought and then said: "I will take him down to the war department and ascertain what can be done."

Leaving the mother at the capitol, the senator and the deserter set off for the war department. The secretary was given the full history of the case. It was perplexing. "I am at a loss, senator, to know what to do," said he. "I guess that we had better call in the adjutant general."

The adjutant general was summoned and acquainted with the facts. His reply was: "The only suggestion I have to make is that we pay the senator the usual reward of $60 for capturing a deserter and then turn this young man over to a guard."

The senator did not collect the reward, but he did see the young man led off to Washington barracks by soldiers. The man, who had for many decades held Pennsylvania in his hand and who had made and unmade presidents, was stumped for a minute or two, but not worsted. He became busy and it was not long until the prisoner in Washington barracks was a free man and carried in his pocket a pardon for deserting from Uncle Sam's army.

In a talk with United States Marshal Stephen H. Stone about the senator as a hunter and fisherman, some interesting tales of the Maine woods were recounted. "It will just be a year tomorrow," said Mr. Stone, "since the senator and I started on our last trip to the Maine woods. I always found that when he started on one of these pleasure journeys, politics and business were dropped. He may have figured out moves on the political checkerboard while he angled for trout or chased the moose, but if he did, the matter was never mentioned. He talked freely of everything but politics and business.

"Although within a few months of 70 years of age, he would each night roll himself in a blanket and lie down on a bed of pine boughs. There were few hunters in the Maine woods who could shoot better than he, even at 70 years of age. His aim seemed to be unerring. As a fisherman I doubt if he had a superior. I remember that during the first weeks I had made the largest catch of trout, in one day getting 62 on my string. That night the senator said he would have to beat my record. The next day he brought in 84 and remarked: 'I had some more, but I ate them.' The gun which Col. Quay carried when a member of the Beaver vigilance committee of 1877 still stands in his residence. In the same year the town was infested with thieves and the citizens decided to patrol the town at night. One night when it was Mr. Quay's night on duty, in the early morning hours, he saw a neighbor quietly gliding toward his residence. The man tried to hide his identity. Col. Quay ordered him to halt, then made him confess that he had been playing poker. 'Did you win?' was the strange inquiry from the patrol. The neighbor confessed that he was ahead of the game. The colonel made him show his winnings and then permitted him to go home. He never told what he would have done to the man had he lost."

Smith Curtis, who succeeded Col. Quay as editor of the Beaver Radical, says that the senator wielded a vigorous pen. "He started the Radical without a subscriber," said he, "and ran the circulation up to 2,000, the largest in the history of the county in those days. Mr. Quay was a keen business man, and had he concentrated his efforts on money making, he would have been a rich man. He had no desire to accumulate great riches, but simply wanted enough money to care for his family. I believe that it will be found that he died a millionaire."

CROWDS FILL THE CEMETERIES

City Parks Deserted Yesterday, While Mourners and Others Went to Burial Grounds.

MANY CARRIED FLOWERS

To lay their floral donations on the graves of relatives and visit the graves of war veterans, thousands of people yesterday visited the cemeteries. There was a noticeable falling off in the attendance at the city parks, the zoo and Carnegie institute and many wondered why the fine weather did not attract more people to these resorts. The street car company apparently had not taken into consideration the change in the movements, as there were barely enough cars to handle the people going to the cemeteries.

As a rule, all of them carried flowers. Although Memorial day is generally observed as a holiday a great many people will be denied the privilege of decorating the soldiers' graves and yesterday they took the opportunity of doing their part. The crowds were perhaps largest at the Allegheny cemetery. Hundreds went to Homewood or in fact to any cemetery where there are a number of veterans' graves. While the decorating of the graves will be done today by the Grand Army there was nothing to prevent one from placing a wreath on the graves yesterday. In the cemetery crowds yesterday afternoon there were many suits of black and much crepe.

The city parks will be an attraction for thousands of people today and Supt. Burke has made every arrangement for the accommodation of picnickers. All of the picnic plots in Schenley and Highland parks have been reserved for the day. New and convenient features that will prove of immense benefit to the park visitors are the restaurants or ice cream pavilions in conjunction with the shelter houses at Schenley and Highland. The first of these was opened yesterday at Schenley by Frank Lorenzi. Within a week he will have opened a second one in the same park and shortly will have one in Highland.

Edwin H. Lemare, organist at Carnegie institute, gave his last recital of the present season yesterday afternoon, in the music hall. Edward Napier will give the recitals during the month of June. Mr. Lemare sails shortly for England.

Last Week of English Grand Opera.

The closing week of the Savage English Grand Opera company's engagement opens this evening at the Nixon with a performance of "Il Trovatore," Verdi's popular opera, with its rich and beautiful melodies, entrancing scenes and rousing choruses. Tomorrow night Wagner's "Tannhaeuser" will be sung, while on Wednesday night the tuneful "Bohemian Girl" is to be given with a notable cast.

is having a marvelous sale. The frontage on Bellevue and Westfield Avenues has been sold out.

Don't forget about the bonds that we give with this property.

Interview the Persons who have made money out of these bonds, some of whom are named in this ad.

People who desire houses beautifully located and supplied with high-class city improvements see that Schwitter West-View is the coming section.

The grand traction loop through Bellevue, enabling Schwitter West-View residents to take a car going either direction and get to downtown Pittsburgh, is having a remarkable effect upon investors. The speed rate of forty-five miles an hour on the private right-of-ways is another item that shows how the value of this property will advance. The asphalt streets, complete sanitary sewerage, electric lights, both gases and sand-filtered, germ-proof water are other items that knowing ones consider.

This water is in use only on our own properties, and will not be piped to any other than our own properties.

Come and see the way Keating West-View Numbers 1 and 2 are being built up. That will show you what this district is going to be. SCHWITTER WEST-VIEW is the cream of it.

Put a five, ten or twenty-dollar bill in your pocket and take a West-View, East St. and Madison Ave. car at Seventh St. and Liberty Ave.

Step over to Keating West-View and ask some of the people who are living there about the money they earned on the free provisional premium bonds we gave them. Have a talk with W. H. Brant, of Perrysville Avenue; J. W. Beers, of Ridgewood Avenue; Miss Margaret Frank, of Ridgewood Avenue, or R. G. Hendler, of Oakwood Avenue.

Did you get one of those $150 lots on Woodland Avenue? Some nice ones still left. Those $650 ones on Highland Avenue in the Orchard section are beauties! Yards are filled with fruit trees and lawns are lovely! Level as your table and a magnificent view.

Much Less Than Half of Regular Prices.

In announcing this unusual sale we wish to state that it is a rare occurrence that induces us to attend a New York auction sale; but the standing of the great jobbing house of Sweetser, Pembrook & Co. was of such a high character, the goods they carried were of such pronounced worth, that we sent 15 of our buyers to New York last week in the interest of their several departments.

This sale was out of the ordinary. The senior member of the firm died, and in order to close out the vast stocks it was agreed among the remaining members to go before the retailers of the country by auction. We had choice from over $1,000,000 worth of finest goods,

In this collection there are also a few dress length skirts, navy and black only.

Some Few After Thoughts.

The first thing that occurs to us is to say that we could not begin to tell of the broad scope of this great sale were we to take up the whole of the paper. The immensity of it is simply incomparable.

You may be very sure that we have made ample arrangements for handling a large crowd—extra salespeople will be placed in the more active departments, and every customer will be waited upon promptly.

People coming in by train, say on the Fort Wayne road, can take street cars direct to our doors; coming up on the Panhandle, if a local train, they can stop off at Point Bridge and transfer to cars direct to our store; on the Pennsylvania road, by walking over to Penn avenue they can get a car that will bring them to our east entrance.

Of course you are fully aware that the accommodations of this store are all that anyone could ask. There's the Restaurant, sixth floor, where you can enjoy a dainty repast at any hour you elect. Then there's the Soda Water Fountain where you can quench your thirst, and it is quite likely you will be thirsty several times throughout the day. If you get a bit tired, run up to the parlors of the balcony overlooking the first floor.

And now with a cordial invitation for you to be with us tomorrow, and a request for a careful reading of this interesting news, we are

FROM SCHOOL AND COLLEGE

Although records went by the board in the school meet Saturday at Washington, Pittsburgh High school nevertheless thinks it will win the championship meet Friday afternoon at Friendship park. Shadyside academy, which was not in the Washington meet, will compete at Friendship park, and it is felt that the East Enders will win points when by different schools Saturday.

High school thinks that if Shadyside wins points in the shot-put and hammer-throw she will carry off the championship. High school looks for Capt. Worrell, Thompson, Harper and Dowling to reap in points.

Riski again showed unexpected strength Saturday. The loss of Wells, last year's star performer, was not severely felt, as Capt. Barnard and Corbett have done fine work. It is expected that 150 athletes will compete at Friendship park Friday. The Saturday meet was productive of new Western Pennsylvania records.

Worrell of High school set a new mark for the 220-yard dash at 22 4-5. Marshall of W. and J. added 4 inches to the pole-vault, clearing the bar at 9 feet 4 inches; Corbett of Riski set the half-mile record at 2:10, while Barnard of Riski made the hammer throw 127 feet 7½ inches. The best local record for the mile relay of 3:51 2-5 was reduced by the W. and J. team to 3:47 3-5. More records are likely to tumble Friday.

"Midget" Spuhler, captain of the High school nine, will play middle field today on Mercer. Bauer taking his position. Spuhler has been bothered with bad hands for some time.

Purdue made a strong finish in Saturday's meet for the championship of Indiana, taking all the points in the pole vault and hammer throw. Purdue captured 62 points; Indiana 41; Notre Dame 18; Wabash 6.

Illinois, by beating the University of Chicago Saturday 11 to 0, clinched the western college baseball championship.

AMMONIA FUMES CAUSE PEOPLE TO CLOSE DOORS

Explosion of Refrigerating Plant of Isabella Furnace Injuries Several Persons.

With terrific force the air pipes of the refrigerating plant of the Isabella furnace, at Etna, burst yesterday at 1 o'clock, injuring several workmen. The ammonia was so strong that a number of employes were overcome and the residents nearby were forced to close their doors and windows. The force of the explosion was such as to completely shatter an 18-inch wall of concrete and brick and break the connecting pipes between the refrigerating plant and furnace No. 1.

The injured soon recovered. One of the employes, however, was unable to continue at work.

The refrigerating plant was recently installed at the Etna furnace by the United States Corporation. Its cost was $20,000. The loss from the explosion will amount to about $5,000. It is supposed that excessive air pressure caused the explosion.

The Weirs seeing defeat, played the baby act in the ninth inning and quit on a decision by the umpire, which was entirely proper according to the rules. THIBETANS ARE EXPELLED FROM PALLA BY BRITISH Suffer Heavy Loss, While English Have Four Killed and 12 Wounded.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS CABLE TO THE GAZETTE.]

LONDON, May 30.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Chumbi, India, says the British expedition on May 26, after a fight of 11 hours, expelled the Thibetans from the village of Palla, close to the British camp at Gyang-Tse. A British lieutenant and three Sepoys were killed and three officers and nine men were wounded. The Thibetans suffered heavily, and 37 of them were taken prisoners. Palla is a walled stronghold from which the Thibetans started building works, with a view to outflanking the British position.

GYANG-TSE, THIBET, May 28.—(Delayed in transmission)—The Thibetans have abandoned their investment of the British rear, and communication with the mission has been restored.

SUNDAY GAZETTE HAD ALL THE WORLD'S NEWS

Comprehensive and Varied Was Budget of Information Contained in the Big Paper.

The Pittsburgh Sunday Gazette covered the news field in every direction yesterday, besides having many pages of interesting special articles. Among the more prominent things printed were: The death of Senator Quay, with details of his last hours and an examination of his illness from his physician. Tributes from scores of prominent men were given, with editorials from Pittsburgh and eastern newspapers; texts of telegrams of condolence and a proclamation by the governor of the state. Sketches of his life, his career in politics and how the news of his death was received in other cities were included. His ancestry was traced and a portrait of the dead senator's father reproduced. Arrangements for the funeral were outlined so far as the family and the various committees which will attend had been able to prepare them.

In the far east the plans of the Japanese Gen. Oku attack Dalny were made known, and Russian sentiment shown to be that there is little hope of keeping Port Arthur. Stories of heroism in the recent fighting were also given, with descriptive letters from correspondents now in Korea and Manchuria.

The adjournment of the Presbyterian general assembly was noted and the fact that the United States government refuses to accede to the request made by the Pandits for the release of Perdicaris. The Methodist Episcopal conference is in its last sessions and details of work before the adjournment on Tuesday were given. The adjournment of the Methodist Protestant general conference was written up fully.

The Pennsylvania railroad is planning a railroad bridge at the Point to connect with the Ft. Wayne for freight purposes and details of this important work were also printed. Maignen, inventor of preliminary filters, is to address the chamber of commerce. Dr. C. C. Wiley resigned from the local United States pension board and told why.

General details of the extraordinary spread of the Memorial day services in the churches and in the schools and cemeteries were also interesting reading to many, and this article was illustrated. Stories of robberies in many nearby towns were bunched so that the public might see how busy criminals are keeping the police in the rural districts busy. Jury refused to permit Sully & Co., the cotton brokers, to undertake a coup by which the firm hoped to reimburse itself. Hundreds of Welsh singers left here for Johnstown to take part in the big eisteddfod there. The growth of the borough of Oakmont has been phenomenal and some of the improvements were noted with many illustrations. In the two cities there were many residence sales and they were given fully.

Old Allegheny college is close to its commencement and some of the preparations, with a short history, made pleasant reading. There were nearly three pages of sports, professional and amateur, including every branch. The money market was reviewed in a masterly fashion. The work of the various labor organizations was given for the week. P. T. F. Lovejoy is doing away with horses in his magnificent stable and will have nothing but autos, and his plans were given.

Auto buses are to run between many city points with passengers and freight. Details were given with a picture of the big building where the machines and crews will be housed. Society doings were covered, and also the work of the women's clubs. Besides these live news items there were many short stories of the world's doings and cables from all the European capitals and points from which news comes.

HALF-MILE RUN IS ONE OF SPEED

Champion Valentine Tells How Young Runners Should Train for Events.

GOOD HEAD WORK REQUIRED

BY H. V. VALENTINE.
American, Canadian, Metropolitan and Military Champion, 1903.

The half-mile is a race of sustained speed. By speed I do not mean that the runner should get out and run with all his might at the crack of the pistol. The kind of speed for half-mile work is an easy, long-striding gait, which, while not a sprint, is fast enough to set up groans at a starting rate.

In my short athletic career I have noticed that most beginning athletes regard the 880-yard run as purely a distance race. This is a great mistake. The half-miler must train to travel the first 100 yards on his speed. This is the point where endurance comes into play. Without it the runner will begin to go to pieces and make a miserable finish. A moderate amount of endurance enables the runner to "fight it out" in the last 200 yards. Thus we see that a fellow must have the two great qualities—speed and endurance—to run a good half mile.

In training for any race a man must know his own requirements. If he is inclined to take on flesh he must do lots of good hard work to reduce himself to racing trim. On the other hand, a man who never gets heavy should be very careful not to overwork himself. It should be his aim to build up his general condition. Once overtrained it very often takes weeks or even months to get back into good shape. The only remedy for an overtrained man is a complete rest for six or eight weeks.

Begin training very easily. Just trot around a couple of laps the first week you train. This will strengthen your legs for the hard work to come. Start to run faster when your muscles feel good and strong. The first time out go three-quarters of a mile at a mile clip. The next time tackle three-eighths of a mile, at full racing speed. Vary these distances as you think you need them. Do not forget your speed. Run through a fast "two-twenty" now and then, trying to strike out in as easy fashion as possible. I am a great believer in moderation in training. Three times a week, with a good race on Saturday, is enough to suit the needs of the average young man. It is quite necessary to condition the muscles of the body also. A few minutes' light exercise each day, bringing into play the muscles of the arms, back and stomach,

GROAT GUILTY IN SECOND DEGREE

Washington County Jury Brings in Verdict Against Pattrovick for Murder.

WERE OUT FORTY-ONE HOURS

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

WASHINGTON, PA., May 29.—The jury in the case of Milovar Pattrovick, tried for the murder of Contractor Samuel T. Ferguson at West Middletown on September 25, last, after being out more than 41 hours, this morning returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree.

The finding of the 12 men in whose hands the fate of the Croatian was placed, was a compromise verdict and was brought in only after hundreds of ballots were taken, and it was ascertained positively that a first degree conviction or acquittal could not be secured. The verdict was a surprise and, according to the attorney for the defense, is illogical under the indictment.

It was 10:15 this morning that the verdict was returned to the court. At 10 o'clock this morning word was sent to Judge Taylor that the jury desired further instructions. They asked if under the indictment and if no agreement could be made they could return a compromise verdict of any kind. Judge Taylor informed the jury that if they were unable to reach any definite conclusion they could return a verdict of first degree, second degree, manslaughter or acquittal. Then a conclusion was reached.

Sheriff C. E. Carothers immediately brought in the prisoner. The 12 jurors filed into the jury box. Foreman George Dunn was asked if a verdict had been agreed upon and he answered in the affirmative. He was asked what this verdict was and replied, "Guilty of murder in the second degree." A poll of the jurors was then taken and the same verdict received. The jury was dismissed, with the thanks of the court. Attorney Templeton, for the defense, at once asked for a delay in sentence until a motion for a new trial could be filed. This was granted and the prisoner remanded to jail.

Pattrovick was deeply affected by the verdict. The Croatian expected an acquittal. When the verdict had been announced he dropped his face into his hands and seemed stunned for a moment. Then he lifted his head and repeatedly wrung his hands, shaking his head and seemingly protesting his innocence, saying:

"I am innocent, you know I am innocent; I never killed that man."

Pattrovick seemed about to collapse, but managed to keep up until he reached his cell. Here he threw himself in a heap on his cot and covered his face with his hands. Pattrovick's verdict was later conveyed to Kovovick, who is now under sentence of death for the Ferguson murder, and he received the announcement of the verdict in silence. The jury did not go to bed at all on Friday night, although they caught a little sleep last night. The vote at one time stood 8 to 4 for conviction and at another stage but one man was holding out for acquittal. It was then that further instructions were asked.

The motion and arguments for a new trial will probably be made the latter part of next week. The maximum penalty that can be imposed, following conviction of murder in the second degree, is 20 years in the penitentiary.

"DIVINE HEALER" DRUMS UP BUT FEW PATIENTS

Man Who Claims to Be Schlatter Has No Chance to Show Power.

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

SALEM, O., May 29.—Dr. Charles McLean, alias "Schlatter the Divine Healer," has lost his one-time power to attract big audiences. About 50 people composed the gathering in Labor hall this afternoon to hear him, though his arrival had been widely heralded.

He said he was the original divine healer and said that he never made a charge for healing on the Sabbath. On other days he charged no less than $10 and not more than $7. Never had he taken more than these amounts except from Richard Croker, whom he cured of dyspepsia. The Tammany boss presented to him a check for $5,000. Then the Tammany chiefs raised him a purse of $10,000. His reason for accepting these amounts was the knowledge that Tammany and the Tammany boss got their money dishonestly and therefore it was no sin to take it from them, but these amounts he distributed among the poor of New York.

He pleaded for those present who were suffering from any human ills to come forward and be healed, without money and without price, but there was not a single response. He said when they come tomorrow night they will have to pay the usual fees.

Passengers Shaken Up at Lancaster.

LANCASTER, PA., May 29.—Through an operator's blunder, late last night the Western express smashed into the rear of the St. Louis express, while the latter train was standing in the station at this place. The rear Pullman coach of the St. Louis express, containing a number of passengers, was damaged and the occupants severely shaken up, while the colliding engine was also badly damaged.

SHOT DOWN NEAR SCENE OF FERGUSON MURDER

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

WASHINGTON, PA., May 29.—Another crime has stained the lonely spot where Contractor Samuel Ferguson was killed last September. Because he refused to give John Gallors money with which to buy beer, Charles Laszlo, it is alleged, was shot by the latter and now lies at the point of death at the Washington hospital.

Laszlo is 18 and Gallors is 25. Both the men were employed at the Ferguson construction camp, near West Middletown. The shooting took place Friday evening, but nothing was known of it here until today. Laszlo and Gallors were working side by side Friday afternoon, when the latter asked Laszlo to lend him some money. The latter refused and Gallors flew into a passion and said, with a curse:

"All right, I'll get even with you."

With this threat he left work. After the day's work was over Laszlo started for his boarding house alone, walking along the road where Samuel Ferguson rode to his death. He had almost forgotten the afternoon's incident, when, according to his story, he suddenly came upon Gallors, who had a shotgun under his arm. He raised it menacingly and asked:

"Now, will you let me have some money?"

Terrified, Laszlo replied: "I tell you I have no money."

With an oath Gallors is said to have aimed the weapon at the boy and fired. Young Laszlo fell with his left leg shattered. About 30 minutes later other workmen found Laszlo lying in the road, weak from loss of blood and almost unconscious. The injured man was taken to the county home, and last night he was removed to the hospital here. Gangrene has set in, and the hospital surgeons do not believe the boy can live more than a few hours.

Information against Gallors was made before Justice of the Peace J. Q. Boyd of West Middletown, and officers are in pursuit of the man.

CRUSADE BROUGHT BIG CROWDS TO DRUG STORES

The Attempt of Connellsville Women to Stop Sunday Sale of Soda Did Not Work.

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

CONNELLSVILLE, PA., May 29.—A record-breaking business in cigars, soda water and fruit today was the result of a movement on the part of the Women's Christian Temperance union to enforce the Sunday closing of fruit stores, soda fountains, etc. Mrs. George P. Brown, president of the local Women's Christian Temperance union, had given notice that these places must close today or that the law would be invoked. No attention was paid to the edict, and all the places that have been accustomed to doing business on Sunday were open as usual.

Sentinels were posted by the temperance organization, and these women spotted every man who stepped up to a soda fountain to slake his thirst, jotting his name down in a little book. The names of all those men who kept their stores open were also entered. As soon as it was discovered that spies were stationed in the streets, crowds swarmed into drug stores and fruit stands and made purchases, "to get their names in the blue book."

Men drank the health of Mrs. Brown in foaming glasses of soda water. The spotters abandoned in despair the effort to corral the names of all who patronized the open places, but each is said to have a little book full of names, including those of leading people in town. It is understood that on Tuesday the women will file informations against each of the offending druggists and fruit dealers, who declare they will stand together and fight the question out in court.

The proclamation declares that the Japanese army is fighting for the cause of justice, pledges protection to persons and property and non-interference with orderly citizens. It promises ample remuneration for all houses and food supplies requisitioned and warns the people to refrain from assisting the Russians, under penalty of severe punishment.

TWO BELLAIRE MEN ARE KILLED ON PANHANDLE

NEWARK, O., May 29.—(Special.)—Charles Beck and John Muhlman, glass workers, whose homes are in Bellaire, were instantly killed at the Panhandle railroad crossing on Vine street, in East Newark, early this morning. The men had been employed at Uhlen. Their bodies were found by the crew of a passing freight train. Muhlman leaves a family in Bellaire besides two brothers who live in Newark.

WHEN LIFE'S AT STAKE

The most timid man will take any chance of escape. The slender rope dropped down the precipice, the slippery log over the abyss, anything that offers a chance of life, is eagerly snatched at. The end the man seeks is safety. He cares nothing for the means to that end.

There are thousands of men and women whose lives are at stake, who are hindered from accepting the one means of safety by foolish prejudice.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has been the means of restoring health to many men and women whose hollow cough, bleeding lungs, emaciation and weakness seemed to warrant the statement of local physicians—"There is no cure possible."

Why should prejudice against a put-up medicine hinder you from trying what has cured thousands of suffering men and women?

"Only for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I think I would be in my grave to-day," writes Mr. Moses Miles, of Hilliard, Uinta Co., Wyoming. "I had asthma so bad I could not sleep at night and was compelled to give up work. It affected my lungs so that I coughed all the time, both day and night. My friends all thought I had consumption. My wife had taken Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it had helped her so much she insisted on my trying his 'Golden Medical Discovery' which I did. I have taken four bottles and am now a well man, weighing 175 pounds, thanks to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains; you lose.

ERICK WOULD ANGE MINE LAW

Inspector Urges Appointment of Commission to Draft New System.

Upon the efficiency of these of- kely the welfare of the and I note with regret past year certificates of ve been granted to men incompetency there can bt.

Other System Preferable.

I hope the miners and operators will seriously consider my remarks upon this question and make a joint effort to have the next legislature repeal this law. The system formerly in vogue in Pennsylvania of selecting inspectors by a competitive examination was the best ever devised. Any other system is preferable to the present one, which we deem the worst extant, and if we are not to return to the old one, let us do as the other states do and give the governor power of appointment, even if it be without the requirements of qualifications."

Mr. Roderick says that the bituminous law of the state in this respect is entirely satisfactory and that the method of selecting inspectors in that region could be adopted for the anthracite region. He calls attention to other defects in the act of 1901 and suggests that the next legislature repeal it, and empower the chief of the department of mines to make an equitable division of the work of the inspectors, without regard to county lines.

"From the present statutes," goes on Mr. Roderick, "complex and intricate as they are, a law could be framed that might meet all the requirements of the anthracite and bituminous regions. The opinion used to prevail that the laws governing the bituminous mining operations need not be as stringent as those governing the anthracite region.

Commission Suggested.

"As a matter of fact, however, there is much more danger of serious catastrophies in the bituminous mines than in the anthracite. There are bituminous mines today in which the carelessness of one man might result in the destruction of hundreds of lives. My observation leads me to think that one good law, stringent, but just, would best meet the interests of all concerned."

Mr. Roderick suggests the appointment of a commission to prepare a general mine law to take the place of all present mine legislation. His idea is that this commission should be composed of two miners, one operator and one mining engineer from the bituminous region; two miners, one operator and one mining engineer from the anthracite region, with one person to represent the governor, who shall act as chairman of the commission.

The latter member should have practical and theoretical knowledge of the workings and ventilation of coal mines, but should have no financial interest in mining. The commission should have power to engage an expert constitutional lawyer to decide all questions of constitutionality and an expert stenographer to make a complete record of the proceedings of the commission to the legislature of 1907.

Relief For Injured Miners.

The legislature should then, Mr. Roderick suggests, without unnecessary delay, enact a law as recommended by the commission, and all amendments offered should be voted down, as the legislature is not competent to amend the mine laws, as not 10 per cent of the members are familiar with the needs of the mining industry.

Mr. Roderick calls attention in the report to the necessity for a system of relief for injured miners and for the families of those who are killed and disabled. He suggests the passage of a law whereby the companies in both the anthracite and bituminous regions should contribute one cent a ton and the employes 1 per cent of their earnings monthly to some person designated as treasurer and, upon information obtainable from the inspectors and the department of mines, this could be paid out to the proper persons.

Mr. Roderick says that if all the companies should take hold of this matter it would be much simpler, as some in the anthracite region have done, but if there is no general law passed few of the companies would subscribe to the fund and few employes would consent to have 1 per cent deducted from their earnings.

Plan to Stop Child Labor.

He suggests that the minimum age for employment outside the mines should be advanced to 13 years, to conform with the school laws of the state, but the present minimum of 12 years for inside employment need not be changed. He does not approve the law advancing the legal minimum to 16 years. He recommends that each district inspector be the authority to receive the age certificates of all children applying for employment.

"After satisfying himself," concludes Mr. Roderick, "as to the correctness of the certificates he should test the applicants' ability to read and write and then furnish them with additional certificates showing that they are legally qualified to work inside or outside the mines, as the case may be. The inspector should also have authority, and it should be made part of his duty, to prosecute all violators of this law and to enable him to do this a special appropriation should be made by the legislature. No employer of labor should be allowed to hire any boy unless he possesses a certificate from the inspector. With these additional requirements it would be possible to eliminate child labor from the coal mines of Pennsylvania."

DECORATION DAY CROWD AT SHORE

Cheap Excursions for Summer Season from Philadelphia Commences Today.

PITTSBURGHERS AT HOTELS

THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE BUREAU.
Young's Ocean Pier.
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 29.

The crowd in Atlantic City today rivaled in size those that thronged the boardwalk last August, but it lacked the life and the rollicking good humor of the summer crowds. It was mostly a Philadelphia crowd that came down to spend Decoration day and the greater number will be off to their homes tomorrow night. Though the crowd was great today, it will be greater tomorrow, because of the fact that both of the railroads will commence the running of one dollar excursion trains from Philadelphia in the morning and they will continue until the end of the season. The crowds that they bring, however, do not stay over night and they spend their time in the water while they are here.

The Pittsburghers who are here are spending most of their time in gossiping and sailing. Tomorrow morning a large party will leave Young's pier for the fishing banks in a launch chartered by G. G. O'Brien. The start will be made at 4 a. m., and if the tide is favorable they will reach the fishing grounds, 10 miles off shore, about three hours later. Mr. O'Brien was out with a party this morning and brought in several hundred pounds of sea bass.

Attorney W. J. Brennen was among the arrivals on the early train from the west this morning. He came to the shore for a needed rest. He is registered at the St. Charles.

Edward Martin and Samuel Wainwright stopped over on their way home from the Princeton-Yale ball game. On their arrival they met ex-County Treasurer William McClure, Smiley Whiteman, William J. Breunen and several other kindred spirits and decided to stay for a week.

The steamer Aries of Philadelphia was reported in distress this afternoon at 3:25, about four miles off Long Beach. The life saving crew at the point went out to the boat and found that the steam pumps had broken. These will be repaired and it is thought the steamer will be able to continue on her journey by midnight.

William M. Dutt, H. L. Hawkins and R. M. Graff are at the Brighton for a few days' visit.

Judge S. Schoyer is at the Marlborough house.

Nathaniel Holmes and Miss Holmes are Pittsburgh guests at the Hotel Brighton.

Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Rhodes of Pittsburgh are visiting their son and daughter at the Marlborough house.

Mrs. Maxwell Casey and Miss Mary Casey are at the Chetwood.

Thomas G. McClure and Miss Ida M. McClure were among the Pittsburgh promenaders on the boardwalk this afternoon.

William C. Lewis, who has been spending several weeks in Atlantic City, will leave tomorrow in his touring car for his home in Pittsburgh. He will endeavor to break the record between this city and Philadelphia with his Panhard racer.

John A. Murphy and J. M. Stonerod are at the Seaside house for a short stay.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hawkins, Miss Kennie M. Fauble, Miss Anna Seel and W. E. Seel are at the Strand.

Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Wolfe, Edward S. Wolfe, Mrs. K. J. Weible, Mrs. E. H. Swindell and Mrs. Wiegle form a party of Pittsburghers staying at the New England hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Wrigley of the East End are at the Grand Atlantic for a short visit.

An interesting golf match between two amateurs was played on the links of the Country club yesterday afternoon between Charles R. Mason and Franklin Hendrickson, both of Pittsburg. Mason was 90 and his opponent's 94. Following this match Mr. Mason challenged Mr. Wasson of Philadelphia for a match and defeated him, his score being 82, while the Philadelphia player went over the course in 94 strokes. The two Pittsburghers are staying at the Rio Grande hotel and have arranged a match, to be played tomorrow morning, between themselves and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Norcross of Penns Grove, the loser to furnish the winners with supper at the Country club.

The Leader department store of 242-244 Fifth avenue, was well represented at the Sweetzer, Pembrook Co.'s (378 Broadway, New York) liquidation sale. Their stock was sold at auction by Wilmerding, Morris & Mitchell, auctioneers. W. S. Patton and Mr. Albert Silberberg, with Mr. John Steker, Mr. Frank P. McDuff, Mr. Frederick Lawrence and Mr. W. T. Jones, were the buyers in attendance. They have returned to the city and are now preparing for a big sale, which will commence Tuesday morning at 8:30 o'clock.

LARGEST YEAR FOR EXPORTS

More Manufactures Were Sent Abroad in 10 Months Than Any Previous Period.

RAW MATERIALS IMPORTED

THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE BUREAU.
Room 10, Postal Building.
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 29.

Exports of manufactures in the fiscal year which ends next month seem likely to exceed those of any preceding year. Ten months' figures just presented by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics exceed those for the corresponding period of any preceding year. The fiscal year 1900 was the banner year in exports of manufactures, but the figures of 10 months' exports of manufactures in the fiscal year 1904 exceed by $19,000,000 those for the corresponding months of the fiscal year 1900. The total value of manufactures exported in the 10 months ending with April, 1904, was $371,712,301, against $352,671,206 in the same period of the fiscal year 1900, which, as already indicated, had the highest record of manufactures exported prior to the fiscal year 1904.

The fact that the present fiscal year has only two months' record to make and is $19,000,000 ahead of the highest figure for the corresponding period in any preceding year (1900) seems to justify the prediction that the exports of manufactures in 1904 will be greater than those of any earlier year. The total value of manufactures exported in the full fiscal year 1900 was $433,851,756. Should the present excess of 1904 over 1900 continue during the remaining two months of the year it would bring the grand total of exports of manufactures up to $450,000,000.

Imports of manufacturers' raw materials also make a very satisfactory showing, the grand total of "articles in a crude condition which enter into the various processes of domestic manufacture" being in the 10 months ending with April, 1904, $267,334,221, against $275,641,687 in the 10 months of last year, and $273,190,650 in the corresponding months of 1902. Exports of manufactures have more than doubled since 1894, and imports of manufacturers' raw materials have considerably more than doubled since that time. The following table shows the value of the great classes of articles imported and exported, respectively, in the 10 months ending with April, 1904, compared with the same period of the fiscal year 1894:

Imports by great classes—	1894.	1904.
Articles of food and live animals	$230,655,187	$ 193,679,819
Crude articles for use in the domestic industries	112,740,519	267,334,221

Articles manufactured ready for consumption	81,236,759	142,089,706
Luxuries and other articles of voluntary use	66,233,304	111,851,006
Total imports	$546,398,183	$ 829,025,237
Exports by great classes—
Agricultural prod'ts	$503,817,151	$ 778,572,162

Products of fisheries	3,775,104	6,155,211
Miscellan'us articles	4,087,034	4,968,867
Total dom. exp'ts	$754,603,714	$1,256,872,397

Children Celebrated Anniversary.

The 53d anniversary of the Sabbath school of the Mt. Washington Presbyterian church was observed yesterday afternoon with appropriate services and Children's day exercises. Songs, addresses and musical numbers made up the program. There was a large attendance of both children and members of the congregation. The Rev. C. S. McClelland, Edward Arrowsmith, J. B. Lash, H. E. Cormack, F. V. Cassell and James Matt were among the speakers.

To Represent "Greater Pittsburgh."

Delegates to the annual convention of the State League of German Catholic Societies, to be held in Altoona on June 6, met in St. Philomena's hall, Sharpsburg, last evening and completed arrangements. Eighty-two delegates will represent this city and wear badges with the inscription "Greater Pittsburgh."

EXTRA STREET CARS ON PRINCIPAL LINES

Cemetery and Park Crowds to Be Accommodated--Trippers Will Run and Transfers Given

Kennywood, Calhoun, Oakwood and Southern have bills of free entertainment and have prepared to handle crowds. Today marks the formal opening of the season at Calhoun, Oakwood and Southern parks. At Calhoun Nirella's Fourteenth Regiment orchestra will furnish music for dancing. At the open air stage there will be a vaudeville show afternoon and evening.

At Southern park the Second Brigade orchestra will be in attendance. The new amusements, including the triangle and the crystal maze, will be open. At Oakwood the Mozart orchestra will be on the platform.

Kennywood, in addition to the score of amusements and vaudeville, will have a man and woman racing on bicycles in mid air and "leaping the gap." There will also be a band concert day and evening.

The Pittsburgh Railways Company has arranged to put extra cars on all lines, especially the cemetery and park routes. Extra cars will be in Greenfield avenue to reach Calvary. "Trippers" will be put on between Forbes and Brady streets and Carrick. If travel is heavy enough the Knoxville hilltop cars will be run out to Carrick instead of turning at Ament street. The Charleroi line cars will run every 30 minutes instead of hourly.

The "trippers" will be run between the Lake Erie depot and Carnegie. Transfers will be given. The transfer cars running on the Point bridge will not be discontinued until Monday night. The bridge then closes to vehicle travel.

TOKYO PAYS LOVING HOMAGE TO HERO DEAD

Bodies of 15 Officers Lost, but Ceremonies Were Held Over Relics.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS CABLE TO THE GAZETTE.]

TOKYO, May 29.—A solemn religious and military ceremony in honor of 15 officers, residents of Tokyo, who were lost at the time of the disasters to the battleship Hatsuse and the protected cruiser Yoshino, were held here today.

The procession formed at the naval college and marched through the city to Aoyata cemetery. Four small caskets, containing relics of the deceased officers were borne on gun carriages, battalions of marines escorting them, while resting on pillows on top of the caskets were the posthumous decorations awarded the officers.

Conspicuous features of the cortege were a dozen white-robed Shinto priests, who conducted the religious ceremonial, and the widows and other female relatives of the deceased officers, clad in pure white, who rode behind the gun carriages.

The entire naval staff and representatives of the army and of other departments, delegations from schools, guilds and labor unions, participated. The foreign naval attaches joined the cortege at the cemetery. Crowds filled the streets through which the procession moved and bowed in prayer when the caskets passed.

EUROPEAN TRIP DELAYED.

Wedding Guest, After the Usual Fight, Arrested When Leaving the Country.

Frank Miller, a young Pole, was badly beaten at a Polish celebration in a house on Harmar street early yesterday morning, and is at his home in Mulberry alley, near Nineteenth street, in a serious condition.

Three of his assailants are under arrest, one of them being captured yesterday afternoon by Inspector Gray as he was about to leave for Europe. They are Michael Valenchi, Peter Vodish and Justwyn Walencryo, all of Harmar street. Walencryo, after the assault on Miller, made preparations to leave the country. When searched at the police station a steamship ticket and a lot of Russian money was found on him. The other two men were arrested yesterday morning.

Miller was beaten with bricks and clubs, and was unconscious several hours after the assault. He will recover.

Fell While Plucking Wild Flowers.

While picking wild flowers yesterday noon, George Lownes, aged 6, fell into the stone quarry at the head of Henderson street, Allegheny. The fall was about 15 feet and he was injured about the back. He was taken to his home at 18 Ellsworth street.

SERVICES HELD FOR SOLDIERS

Special Sermons on Memorial Day Were Preached in Many Pulpits.

PATRIOTISM WAS THE KEYNOTE

Memorial services were conducted in many churches yesterday in the two cities. In many instances veterans attended in a body. In the Fourth Avenue Baptist church last evening over 300 veterans of the Civil war assembled, representing Encampment No. 1, Union Veteran Legion; Gen. Alexander Hays Post No. 3, G. A. R.; Trent, P. R. Geary Post No. 236, G. A. R.; Duquesne Post No. 259, G. A. R.; Washington Infantry and Sons of Veterans. The church was decorated with national colors and flags, potted plants and cut flowers. An overflow congregation was present. Patriotic airs were rendered by two large choirs and the address of the evening as made by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Warren G. Partridge, who said in part:

Suppose the south had seceded from the union and established a permanent republic. That would have been the entering wedge for universal dismemberment. The eastern states would have had the same right to secede; so would the western, northern and middle states. Suppose that dismemberment had continued until we had a score of independent nationalities within the limits of the United States. Think of the complications constantly arising from the proximity of petty and jealous provinces. There would be constant conflict over state frontiers, custom houses, forts, standing armies. Variety of laws and tariffs and coinage would block the wheels of liberty and progress. And the people would be overwhelmed with enormous taxes in support of many independent governments and to maintain that large standing armies to protect their frontiers and their menaced rights. Dismemberment of our republic would result in the suicide of 80 of our republic. All nations that have followed dismemberment into petty provinces have ultimately come to a national wreck. If America ever suffers dismemberment, as she came so near doing in 1861, in less than half a century she will fall a prey to the mighty nations of Europe and her magnificent territory will be parceled out, as Poland was, to greedy and hostile powers. The nations of Europe are bent on foreign conquest.

If the south had been permitted to secede the fallacious and dangerous doctrine of state sovereignty would have become established, and very soon our republic would have been a mass of petty provinces, which would have fallen an easy prey to the conquering arms of European nations.

United, with 70,000,000 of free people, America can defy the combined armies of earth. Why we enjoy peace among the nations, not because of our prowess in arms, not simply because of our boundless territory and independence, but because 70,000,000 of people are united. Our only safety is in a united country. If we can hold together our heterogeneous elements of population we shall become a world power. Divide us then, we are destined to become the mightiest nation on earth.

The men of '61 sealed with their blood their love for the grand principle of united nationality, and the children will see to it that indivisible war the same mighty results as were accomplished by the American revolution. Andersonville and Fredericksburg, the Wilderness and Malvern Hill will be as sacred to the northern heart as the south, as well as at the north-100 years hence. Our posterity in all sections of our country will commemorate the heroic achievements of the patriots of Shiloh and Gettysburg as well as the patriots of Valley Forge and Yorktown. Every battle fought on this continent to defend the Stars and Stripes has been a battle fought for liberty and Christianity, and God will see to it that justice is done at the bar of history. We can afford to wait for justice to its magnificent consciences. Thousands of our people today feel grateful to the men who won the victory. But the day is coming when every American, of all parties and of all sections of the country, will do ample justice to the union soldiers who defended the nation's flag in 1861.

Gen. George Custer post 88, G. A. R., was addressed last evening in St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church, Sharpsburg, by the Rev. Father Graham, pastor of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic church.

The Rev. W. A. Stanton of the Shady Avenue Baptist church addressed members of McPherson post 117, G. A. R., in the church last evening. The exercises included patriotic music.

MAJ. A. P. DAVIS' MEMORY HONORED BY HIS ORDER

Services Held at the Grave of the Founder of the Sons of Veterans.

Memorial services over the grave of Maj. A. P. Davis, founder of the Sons of Veterans, were held yesterday afternoon in Allegheny cemetery. There were present, in addition to details from the majority of the camps of order, a large number of persons who knew Maj. Davis in life. The members of the order formed at the Butler street entrance to the cemetery and marched to the grave in Section F of the cemetery. There a hollow square was formed about the grave and the exercises held, with David C. Coffey of Davis camp, Sons of Veterans, presiding. The meeting was opened with prayer by the Rev. N. W. Tannehill, followed by a hymn by the Trinity church choir. Then came the address of the day by the Rev. F. M. Cordon of camp No. 104, who dwelt at length on the heritage of a son of a soldier of the rebellion. A second hymn by the choir was followed by an address by Mr. Coffey, who advocated the erection of a suitable vault in which the remains of Maj. Davis might repose for all time.

Plants were deposited on the grave by representatives of all the camps. Company G of Sharpsburg fired the salute for the dead over the grave, and just as the sound of the firing died away the bugler of camp 136 sounded "taps." The Rev. Mr. Tannehill pronounced the benediction.

MAID ACCUSED OF THEFT.

Money Was Missing, and the Girl's Suspicious Actions Caused Her Arrest.

Through the disappearance of a card case containing $35, the police of the East End station unearthed wholesale thefts in the residence of F. W. Schleiter, 5720 Stanton avenue, late Saturday night, and arrested Cora Chambers, a colored maid employed in the house. She was yesterday held in $500 bail for court by Magistrate Negley.

Late Saturday night Miss Mary Pollock of 320 Jeannette street, Wilkinsburg, a trained nurse who has been employed in the Schleiter home for several weeks, discovered the loss of her card case and money. The police were notified, and Special Officers Edward Frank and David Corbett detailed on the case.

While making a search of the house they noticed the sudden actions of the maid. One of the officers detained her while the other searched her room. In a trunk was found a razor, patent leather slippers, scarf pin and a large quantity of women's clothing, which was identified at once as belonging to Mrs. Schleiter.

When confronted with this evidence, the maid at first denied her guilt, but finally showed the officers where she had concealed the card case and money under the kitchen stove.

MANY SERVICES IN MONONGAHELA VALLEY

In Some Instances Scattered Veterans Gathered Without Having Organization.

Impressive services in memory of dead soldiers were held in Braddock churches and in several churches in the Turtle Creek valley last evening. Members of Major A. M. Harper post No. 181, G. A. R., of Braddock, attended services in the Calvary Presbyterian church almost 100 strong. About 20 members of Col. A. L. Hawkins camp of foreign service men and nearly 75 members of Capt. William R. Jones camp, Sons of Veterans of Braddock, marched with the veterans. The sermon was delivered by the Rev. Joseph F. Clokey. The church was decorated. The congregation of the First Methodist Episcopal church also honored the memory of the soldiers with a special "platform service."

At Turtle Creek in the First Baptist church the Rev. William McConnell, pastor of the First United Presbyterian church of Turtle Creek, delivered the memorial sermon to the few surviving members of Capt. McMastern post, G. A. R., of that place, which was forced to surrender its charter several years ago because of the small ranks of its members. Members of the Spanish-American War Veterans association of the Turtle Creek valley turned out with the Grand Army men. The pastors of several churches of Turtle Creek suspended their services to permit their congregations to attend the memorial services.

The Rev. J. E. Ricketts, pastor of the First United Presbyterian church of Wilmerding, last evening delivered a memorial address for eight or ten members of the Grand Army who live in Wilmerding, and a few from Pitcairn and Wall boroughs.

SOLDIERS CARRIED THE WAR FLAGS TO CHURCH

Listened to a Sermon on the Good Results of the Fights They Waged.

The Rev. J. Allison Platts, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church of Allegheny, preached last night to more than 200 old soldiers of the North Side. The members of Col. Cloyd Post, No. 232; James M. Lysle post, No. 128, and Abe Patterson post, No. 88, attended in a body and carried with them the bullet-torn flags of the civil war.

The Rev. Platts spoke on "The Larger Meaning," his text from Isaiah xlix:6. He spoke of the part the soldiers of the union had in making the history of the United States and of the duty that remained with the citizens of the country in advancing the principles of liberty and Christianity into the world. The old soldiers fought in the rebellion.

The ambition and attainments of the nations of Greece and Rome, and the immortality that resulted in their distinguished and fall, were spoken of as warnings that should be heeded by our country in its course toward international supremacy. The discovery of America was an epoch in the history of the Christian world, as it resulted in the laying of the foundations of a world-power in which seventy-five bring the world to Christ. The duty of good citizenship and Christian living, he said, is something we owe to the men who sacrificed so much that one nation rather than two should live and flourish on this continent. Mr. Platts said, can exert a ten-fold more potent influence in the congress of nations, and in the cause of Christ, than two nations that would continually have been bickering.

The other contestants were: E. B. Knaebel, on "The Centenary of Gregory the Great;" E. L. Davin on "The Dissolution of the Irish Parliament," and C. S. Sterakowski on "The Future Glory of the United States."

Music was furnished by the college orchestra, and there were a number of vocal selections. The judges of award were the Rev. J. J. Hessler, Prof. J. M. Wisman, G. Byrnes and C. V. Dunleyy. The medals will be presented at the college commencement.

JOLIET ESCAPED.

Efforts of Striking Masters and Pilots to Stop Vessel at Port Huron Unavailing.

DETROIT, MICH., May 29.—Efforts were made here and at Port Huron to stop the steamer Joliet, which, in spite of the masters' and pilots' strike, succeeded in clearing from Cleveland Friday for Fort William. Warrants were sworn out for one of the officers of the vessel, charging that he had jumped board bills at both Detroit and Port Huron.

The proceedings at Detroit were not carried beyond the point of issuing the warrant. A Port Huron tug was in readiness to chase the Joliet, when the Deputy United States marshal, to whom the case had been referred by Sheriff Davidson, decided that no violation of federal law was shown in the Port Huron warrant, and he refused to act.

PASTORS URGE CHURCH UNION

Recent Action of Convention Was Lauded in Many Local Pulpits Yesterday.

ECONOMICAL ARRANGEMENT

Efforts toward the union of congregations of similar doctrines taken in several of the conventions held throughout the country during the past months formed the theme of many sermons yesterday, while in some instances the matter was presented during other discourses. Speaking of the action of the Presbyterian general assembly, where he acted as commissioner from Pittsburgh, the Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young of the Second Presbyterian church, said yesterday morning:

The more than two-thirds vote of the Cumberland Presbyterian general assembly last Wednesday at Dallas, Tex., for union with us, and the almost unanimous vote of our assembly Friday for union with them ought to be followed, and I believe will be followed, by the vote of the Southern Presbyterian church for union within a year or two, and shortly after by the United Presbyterian and lesser bodies until the entire Presbyterian flock of America shall be in one fold and there are evidences of further merging. Terrific as the responsibility was, I was never clearer in a matter of duty than when voting Friday to help answer Christ's prayer for unity. Let those who oppose the separate presbyteries for whites and blacks remember that to refuse to permit them is to refuse to preach the Gospel to the whites of the south, blameable, you may insist, for not being willing to mingle with the blacks; but when we are out evangelizing we must not confine ourselves to people already perfect. Friday was Presbyterianism's greatest day since the reunion of the old and new schools here in Pittsburgh 35 years ago.

"Heart Throbs of the Nation" was the subject of the sermon delivered by the Rev. E. M. Wood in the Fifth Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, Oakland, this morning. Marking the importance of the prevailing effort of unionism in church effort, the pastor said in part:

The summer months have witnessed many of the great events in national and ecclesiastical history. June and July will ever remind us of Waterloo and Gettysburg. May is the ecclesiastical convention month of England and America. Fraternal and ecclesiastical union has been the simultaneous heart throb in these religious bodies. Back of this have been many years of incidental, though perhaps unintentional, preparation—namely, the great Chautauqua movement, the Moody and Sankey evangelistic campaigns of twenty years to-date. We should not forget the Red Cross agency and the charity and philanthropic works of our cities in which hands have been joined by all denominations. The spirit among all religious bodies greater similarity even in forms of service, making little embarrassment in united effort. There is a greater agreement in religious teachings. Subjects provoking controversy have been shelved and common ground has been sought upon which to stand together. We have gained courage on questions such as Mormonism, divorce, the Sabbath, schools, temperance and general morality. We have agreed not to do as our fathers, to eat sour grapes and set our children's teeth on edge. Church organizations of similar faith will be thus to come together. Consolidation is a great economic arrangement. It would remove many hinderances to home and foreign missionary work by ending these disgraceful and damaging unseemly competition. Such united effort entirely removes one of the old objections to Christianity—its needless divisions, and hastens the fulfillment of the Lord's prayer for union among His followers.

CALAMITY OF SUCCESS.

The Rev. Dr. W. B. Slutz Spoke on Achievements Worthless by Godlessness.

"The Calamity of Success" was the sermon theme of the Rev. Dr. W. B. Slutz in the Lincoln Avenue Methodist Episcopal church last evening. The pastor took for his text Mark viii:36, "What is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" and said in part:

Success at any cost is a calamity rather than a blessing. Our success, to have the sanction of the highest wisdom, must minister to the betterment of others. Success as ambition which Jesus is here condemning reduces the spirit of personal greed that ignores God and the claims of judgment. Many a man gives himself so fully to his task that he sees nothing beyond it. He will have a physical achievement successful, but his exertion has deadened all the sensibilities of his soul. That is why so many men live on a low level and rarely appreciate the joys and comforts of human life.

No one questions the literary success of Lord Byron. The resources of his intellect were amazing. All his writings throb with a wonderful fund of wit, humor, pathos and eloquence, but this youth, whose ambitions were mostly worthy, perished ere he had learned how to live. We do not judge him by his tragical end. Men can succeed in life's battle by the resources of genius or by the force of intellect, but at last how often their success is a calamity. Francis Bacon is still recognized as one of the great thinkers and philosophers, but he is not unknown as a cunning traitor and a base ingrate. He knew philosophy but never knew the philosophy of the plan of salvation. How many a promising youth has brought bitter sentiments upon his own successes, because he only sought personal gratification and earthly glory.

What if we do win the glittering earthly prize and have the world's acclaim of the huzzas of popular favor, but fail to get in touch with the heavenly prize! What if our names are counted with the names of the captains of industry but are not found in the record our Lord keeps! What profit shall we have if we actually learn how to measure the stars and the planets and become expert in all the lines of earthly wisdom, but never seek the wisdom that comes from above! What a calamity for any soul that is thrilled with the charm of music to neglect having his soul tuned to the music of the Redeemer! You may possess rare talents in the canvas and have a splendid ambition to make the canvas breathe with life and beauty, but what a calamity awaits you if you fail to learn that the highest art is the art of living and the noblest service is the service of love.

UNION BLACKLISTED.

Lake Carriers' Association Refuses to Employ Any Member of Masters' Organization.

CLEVELAND, O., May 29.—William Livingstone, president of the Lake Carriers' association, tonight gave out the following statement:

The Masters' and Pilots' association having resorted to blacklisting, expulsion and arbitrary fines in the endeavoring to intimidate and prevent licensed officers from manning vessels, the executive committee have decided that to protect the men now at work, and to settle positively this question, the management of vessel property, that no captain will be employed who retains his membership in the Masters' and Pilots' association."

Pastor Russell Reviews How Tribulations Ennoble Some, With Opposite Effect at Times.

THE GATE OF CONSECRATION

INDIANAPOLIS, May 29.—Pastor Russell of Allegheny, Pa., spoke here twice today to thoughtful audiences. His afternoon discourse was on "The Oathbound Covenant," from Hebrews vi:17-20. His morning discourse was from the text, "Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people." (Isaiah lxii:10.) He said:

The Lord's messages through His prophets of old were stated in such a form as to be applicable frequently to large measure both to natural Israel and spiritual Israel. Our text and the entire chapter, of which it forms a part, is of this order. The preceding context refers to trials and difficulties of the Lord's people, and assures them that the unfavorable conditions of the present time shall not always obtain; truth shall not always fall in the streets; error, selfishness and sin shall not always prosper. EVENTS IN FINANCIAL WORLD ONLY INTENSIFY UNCERTAINTY

Extent of Business Retrenchment Now Under Way Not Fully Known—Stocks Lack Strength During the Past Week.

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, May 29.—Events in the financial world during the last week, in the opinion of the casual observer, served only to intensify the uncertainty over the future, which has existed for several weeks and which has been clogging the machinery of speculative Wall street. To others the occurrences had an important bearing on the outlook, as indicating the establishment of conditions making for decreased business, lower earnings and possibly lower values. It would seem that no definite estimate has been made of the effects and the extent of business retrenchment and inactivity now under way, nor whether the stock market has fully discounted the full range of these conditions. As a result, the stock market pendulum swung idly during the week within an exceedingly narrow range, until toward the close it came almost to a complete stop.

The bank statement appeared on Saturday, when the stock exchange was closed. No opportunity was had therefore to observe the effect on the market of the gain for the week of $10,006,000 in cash reported by the clearing house banks. Ordinarily a gain in cash of such big proportions would be welcomed with a demonstration by the bulls as tending to strengthen the financial situation. But at present there seems to be little need for any additional supplies of cash, if the loaning rates for time and call funds serve as a basis for an opinion. Money is a drug on the market, and brokers experience difficulty in finding employment for it in the ordinary channels.

No one would have believed last July or August, when stocks were at the lowest and money dearest, that within a year New York banks would have shipped $90,000,000 in round numbers in gold to Europe and contracted to pay $25,000,000 for the purchase of Japanese bonds, not to mention the big proportion of the $35,000,000 Cuban bonds which will be placed in this country. In the last seven weeks, however, $60,000,000 in gold has been shipped to Europe without creating a ripple of motion in the money market.

When the turn for the better or worse, as the case may be, will come, is a subject concerning which the data and information at hand are so incomplete as to make a forecast at the present time most inconclusive. The shrewdest speculators apparently have not come to any conclusion, and are holding aloof. The capitalists directing businesses with ramifications in all parts of the country, are making time and awaiting further details.

There is more work now under way and starting.

A light producer was drilled in at Milton, Cabell county. It is the Charles Creek Oil and Gas Company's No. 3 on the C. E. Burns farm and will probably make a 15 or 20-barrel pumper in the Big Lime formation. Development work in this district is increasing and some is important as to location. In the Bonds Creek district, in Ritchie county, there has been a sharp decline in operations. South of Harrisville there is a little new work starting, but in the older part of the Bonds Creek field there is little work under way. Near Wick, Tyler county, new work is increasing and more good producers have been completed during the week. The oil is developed in the Big Injun.

Southwest of Burgettstown, Washington county, is the only local development that shows any life and the promise of an increased production. During the week the Southern Oil Company & Greenlee drilled in their No. 4 on the Alexander Hays farm and secured a producer good for 100 barrels a day. This company has started a large amount of new work in this district.

The well drilled in south of the M. Finnegan development, on the Swearingen farm, between Georgetown and Hookstown, is holding up at 40 barrels a day and gives rise to the opinion that a new pool may be developed. Owing to previous luck it cannot have a large area. In this county there is a disposition to look deeper for production. North of Georgetown the M. Finnegan test on the Capt. Calhoun farm is producing 10 barrels a day from what is known as the Poe sand.

RUSSIANS STILL STRONG.

Reverses in the Orient Cause But Fractional Fall of Bonds in London.

LONDON, May 29.—There was very little business done on the stock market last week, operators being occupied with the settlement.

While the uncertainty of the course of the Russo-Japanese war induced a feeling of hesitation and a consequent heaviness in prices, Russians continued well supported by Paris, and the news of the Kinchau battle only caused a fractional fall in Russian bonds. None of the markets showed noteworthy features. American railroad securities advanced slightly early in the week, but the improvement was not maintained.

Monroe County Gusher Took Small Spurt Without a Shot

The sensation in the oil fields of the lower southwest and Southeastern Ohio during the past week was made by the Southern Oil Company's well on the George Wahl farm, three miles northwest of Woodsfield, Monroe county, O. From 40 barrels an hour it dropped on last Thursday to 10 barrels an hour and the owners decided to give it a shot, but when the tools were run the production went up to 15 barrels an hour and the dose of high explosive was not administered. Near Dillonvale, Jefferson county, another test has been drilled in, making the second producer for that development. It is on the McBride farm and like the first, on the Stringer farm, is owned by the Jefferson County Oil Company. The new strike is estimated to be good for from 50 to 75 barrels a day. The Stringer farm test had an initial production of 20 barrels an hour.

Operators on the West Virginia side were not without an attraction or two. The discoveries were not such as to presage new producing territory, but they will have some bearing on future operations in several localities. In the Littleton district, Wetzel county, the best well of the week in the deep sand districts was found. It is owned by the Philadelphia Company and is on the J. K. Anderson farm. The well, which is No. 2 on the farm, was drilled down from the Big Injun to the Gordon formation and when drilled into the second pay swung to previous luck to flow at the rate of 20 barrels an hour and for the first 24 hours produced better than 300 barrels. At the same time the Philadelphia Company got its good producer on the J. K. Anderson farm, the Hope Natural Gas Company drilled in a test on the Enoch Anderson farm and secured a producer that started at 100 barrels a day.

On the east side of the Folsom district, the wells completed during the week were nearly all light producers or dry holes. On the Pritchard-Dye farm, the South Penn got two fairly good producers but all others were light or dry in the Salem district, in the same county, the new wells came in very light. The Pine Grove extension, in Wetzel county, is not furnishing any large wells.

Some surprises were encountered in the Reed grit development in Calhoun county. The producing formation had been found to be very uniform till the past week, when two dry holes were encountered. The first was Mallory Bros. & Stewart's test on the Robert Smith farm. The second was the South Penn Oil Company's No. 8 on the Camden-Summers farm, in advance, and to the southwest of developments, the Townsell Oil Company drilled in its No. 1 on the A. C. Fisher farm and secured a fine producer. Despite the many dry holes completed during the week, the production of the Yellow Creek district is increasing.

CEREALS TAKE DROP ON CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Lower Cables and Unfavorable Weather Tend to Depress Prices.

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

CHICAGO, May 28.—Lower cables and continued favorable weather depressed wheat prices today, final figures on the July delivery being down ½c. Corn is off ¾c. Oats show a loss of ¼@⅝c. Provisions are 2½c higher to 5c lower.

The weather and cables caused moderate selling of wheat at the start, resulting in a slight decline. July being off ⅛@⅜c at 86@86¼c. There was some buying that looked like covering of the same character that has been in progress for several days. This demand had a tendency to hold prices fairly steady at the initial decline. Later, however, belated holders of May commenced to liquidate. Ensuing weakness started considerable selling in other months all around. The September option showed relatively a fair degree of firmness, due to purchases of nearly a million bushels by a house with northwest connections.

Extreme fluctuations marked trading in May and much difficulty was experienced in making sales. Late selling in July and September was confined largely to local traders and indicated a disposition to close up for the holidays. Weakness in corn had a depressing influence during the last hour. After selling off to 85⅝c, July closed at 85¼c. May ranged between 95½c and 97½c, closing at 96¼c. Clearances of wheat and flour were equal to 8,000 bushels. Primary receipts were 90,000 bushels, as against a holiday a year ago. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 64 cars, as against 92 cars last week.

Sentiment in corn was decidedly bearish, due to unusually heavy receipts and to almost perfect weather conditions for the growing crop. There was considerable liquidation throughout the day and the demand was quite meager. The market closed almost at the lowest point. July opened ⅛@⅜c lower at 47⅝@47¾c, sold down to 46⅛c, and closed at 47c. Local receipts were 686 cars, with 92 of contract grade.

Oats were under similar bearish influence in the matter of the weather and liberality of receipts, as was the corn market. Trading displayed considerable nervousness, but the volume of business was small. A large proportion of trading was in the way of evening up trades in the May delivery. After opening a shade lower at 36⅝c, July declined to 35¾c and closed at 35½c. Local receipts were 172 cars.

The provision pit was practically deserted and business almost at a standstill. The easier tone in grain offset a firm hog market and caused slight losses. July pork closed 5c lower at $11 27½. July lard was off 2½c at $6 47½. Ribs were up 2½c at $6 57½. Estimated receipts for Monday—Wheat, 4 cars; corn, 481 cars; oats, 126 cars; hogs, 44,000 head.

The leading futures, reported by John D. Armstrong & Co., members of the Chicago board of trade, Farmers Bank building, are as follows:

The Three Rivers

[Special Telegram to The Gazette.]

CINCINNATI, May 28.—The stage of the river at 6 o'clock this evening marked 18.5 feet and falling, making a fall of 1.6 feet during the last 24 hours. Weather clear and hot, with heavy winds tonight and threatening rain. Local packets were in and out as usual, doing a big excursion business. The Coney Island boats did a land-office business today, it being the opening day. There was no tow-boat movements here today.

LOUISVILLE—River falling, with 7.8 feet in the canal, 5.6 feet on the falls and 17 feet below the locks. Raining.

CALLIOLIS—River 16 feet and stationary. Clear and warm.

POINT PLEASANT—River 13 feet 8 inches and stationary. Passed down, Greenwood, Antoinette, with Swallow & Markle's showboat. Up, Kanawha, Tornado, Sam Brown, Valiant, Volunteer, Fallie and Henry Debus.

PARKERSBURG—River 12 feet and rising. Clear and hot. Bedford left at 4 a. m. for Wheeling, Virginia at 9 p. m. for Cincinnati.

WHEELING—River 13 feet 9 inches and falling. Clear and warm. Up, Big Kanawha, Keystone State and Kanawha, for Pittsburgh. Down, Virginia, for Cincinnati; Lorena, for Zanesville. Up with empties—W. A. Flinn and Tom Rees.

MORGANTOWN—River 7 feet 6 inches and stationary. Clear and warm.

HARBOR WAS CLEARED.

All Coal Here Went Out Yesterday. Empties Were Towed Away.

The stage of water at Davis island dam at 9 o'clock last night was 8.6 feet and the river falling.

Local coal wharfs were thoroughly cleaned up yesterday. All loaded barges moved out, while empties were towed to repair shops and will be redistributed to the mines, leaving the rivers clearer than they have been this year. The Pacific went down with 4 coal boats and 10 barges; Ironsides, 12 barges; John Moren, 12 barges; Harvester, 5 coal boats, 4 barges and 2 flats; Tom Lyle, 8 barges, and Frank Gilmore, 6 barges. Preparations were being made along the rivers yesterday for excursion business today when the Mayflower, Francis J. Torrance, Brownsville packet, and other boats will take out pleasure parties.

Lock No. 1, which has been closed for repairs for several months, was reopened Saturday evening. The Sam Clarke did not get out yesterday, being laid up for repairs. About all the mined coal in the upper pools went out on yesterday's run, and, together with fast falling waters, makes the outlook for this week not encouraging.

Harbor No. 23 has called a special meeting for 10 o'clock tomorrow morning to take action on the deaths of Capts. Price and Miller of the ill-fated Fred Wilson.

TWO FATALLY INJURED IN DYNAMITE BLAST

RENOVO, PA., May 29.—(Special.)—Ruggles Buck and Robert Probst were probably fatally injured by a dynamite explosion in the Clay mines of the Pleasanton Fire Brick Company. The men were tampering with the dynamite, when it let go. Buck's eyes were blown out and he was terribly burned. Probst was burned about the face and body. The two were removed to the Lock Haven hospital.

Stain, if it's LAWRENCE, means to improve not destroy.

REVIEW OF THE WEEK IN LOCAL MARKETS

A Big Demand for Berries and Melons—Butter Is Reduced. Business Slack Generally.

Local commercial markets were marked last week by perceptible falling off in demand. This was true very generally and particularly in the hay and grain business and groceries. Produce moved rather more freely and the latter part of the week showed upward tendencies that were wholly unexpected. Fruits were in good request, as they usually are just prior to a holiday. More bananas moved out during the last two days than have been sold in Pittsburgh in several years. The demand for strawberries was rather unsteady, owing to the fact that a great deal of poor stock came into the market. The berries were in excellent demand Saturday, however. A car of new Virginias was among the arrivals. Receipts were light toward the close of the week. Better stock is expected this week. New potatoes showed easier toward the close. Arrivals were very heavy early in the week, but closed light, stock commanding full prices. The call for melons was beyond expectations. A few cars of watermelons and cantaloupes came in and were snapped up in a hurry at stiff prices.

Sugars were advanced during the week and the market still holds firm as usual. Coffee and sugar seemed to have the call in this line. Demand on flour was fair, but not good near the end of the week. Trade was light all around, compared with what is usually expected at this time of year. The Elgin butter board announced a reduction Saturday, Monday being a holiday. The reduction is 1 cent, and local prices have been adjusted to meet the change. Eggs held up all week and sold as high as 18½ cents right along, that big heat candled stock brought that figure. Very little stock sold below 17¼ cents. From indications the supply of salt fish will be very limited this summer. War is a big factor in the salmon market this year, and according to reports the Columbia river will be in none too big supply during this season, which opens next month.

Hay and grain receipts were about normal last week; this was true especially of hay. No. 1 timothy sold during the week, owing to withdrawal of heavy buyers, who anticipated lower prices. Concessions had to be made generally to effect sales on this account, and prices went down. Fifteen dollars was the best bid for No. 1 timothy Saturday. No 2 oats offered at 47½ cents Saturday and 45 cents was the best bid. Millfeed stays high in spite of pasturage conditions; many mills are not running and this has so curtailed the supply of feed that prices may hold up for some time yet.
